Hodding Carter may also quit

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has resigned after disagreeing with President Carter's decision to launch a military mission to rescue American hostages in Iran.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter accepted the resignation.

It was understood also that Hodding Carter, who has been Vance's spokesman as assistant secretary of state for public affairs, was also resigning, but officials declined public comment.

The White House released an exchange of hand-written letters in which Carter told his principal foreign policy adviser: "Because you could not support my decision regarding the rescue operation in Iran, you have made the correct decision to resign."

The president's letter, dated today, went on:

"I know this is a matter of principle for you, and I respect the reasons you have expressed to me."

Vance's letter, written on state department stationery last Monday said he had taken the decision "with a heavy heart."

After listing a number of the administration's foreign policy achievements, Vance told Carter: "I know how deeply you have pondered your decision on Iran. I wish I could support you in it. But for the reasons we have discussed I cannot."

Those reasons were not explained in the letters or by spokesman Powell, who said Vance had left in "an honorable difference in principle on this matter."

But privately, a senior administration official said Sunday night that Vance considered the mission too risky.

In Tehran, Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said the resignation proves the rightness of the Iranian revolutionary cause.

Moinfar said Carter now must resign and "apologize to the American people."

Asked whether Vance's resignation now clears the way for further military efforts against Iran, Moinfar said "our militant people are not afraid of this wild cow's operations."

Powell said Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher would take

Remains display outrages U.S.

Times News Services

The White House reacted with outrage to the display at the occupied U.S. embassy in Tehran of the charred remains of American servicemen killed in the aborted commando mission to rescue the American hostages.

"These are the documents of the crimes of America," said Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkahli, as the bodies were displayed to the world press at the occupied embassy.

Khalkhali, known as Iran's hanging judge for sending scores to their deaths before firing squads in the days after the revolution, supervised the transfer of the bodies from the desert airfield where the rescue mission was aborted to the occupied embassy.

He said he "counted nine heads" in the recovered remains and claimed "many" more Americans "turned into powder" in the desert. His count of killed Americans conflicted with White House statements though U.S. officials say the discrepancy may be explained by the fact that one of the commandos who returned lost his wallet during the retreat.

White House spokesman Jody Powell reacted angrily to Khalkali's ghoulish news conference and the display of the bodies.

"Clearly that sort of behaviour constitutes a new low in moral depravity," he said.

"That sort of behaviour would also be a violation of Islamic behavior and principles." Powell said. "It is difficult to believe that a faithful follower of Islam would participate in such a thing."

The bodies will be handed over to representatives of the Pope, the International Red Cross and the Swiss government, Tehran Radio reported today, citing a statement from the office of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

U.S. rates on skids?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and Bankers Trust Co. today trimmed their prime lending rates a full point to 18½ per cent, resuming the uneven decline in the interest rate charged a bank's best business customers.

Morgan, the nation's fifth largest commercial bank, and Bankers, the No. 18 Bank of New York, assumed the low position among major banks.

In addition to the two New York banks, National Bank of Detroit today also made a cut to 18½ percent.

Fuel rationing planned

GREENWICH, N.S. (CP) — A federal plan for the allocation and public rationing of gasoline and fuel oil in Canada will be released within a month, the president of the National Automotive Trades Association of Canada said here Saturday.

David Bruce of Vancouver said the federal plan was drawn up in preparation for the possible closing of the Persian Gulf to oil tanker traffic.

He said that with rationing, Canada's fuel reserves could hold out for three or four months "at best."

That estimate, he said in an interview, takes into account all oil tankers now headed towards Canada and also what is in reserve.

Earlier, he told the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Retail Gasoline Dealers' Association that closing the Persian Gulf to tanker traffic will mean immediate gas rationing in Canada.

If the Persian Gulf were closed, foreign oil would still be available, but at much higher prices.

The allocation and rationing plan was in the formative stage, with the federal government trying to update its emergency energy plan with help from the provinces' energy departments and the oil companies.

"It will operate much like the system in the U.S and is very close to coming out. . . probably within two weeks."

'Budget aim to ease rent pinch'

RICHMOND (CP) — Measures to ease tight rental housing markets will be contained in the first Liberal budget, federal Public Works Minister Paul Cosgrove said Sunday.

Speaking to reporters and a Liberal party task force in this municipality south of Vancouver, Cosgrove said mortgage renewals at current high interest rates are his greatest concern.

But while provincial governments have shown dissatisfaction with high interest rates, Cosgrove said a major rate-subsidy program is beyond the federal government's means.

No date for the budget has been set, he said.

Cosgrove, minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. which runs federal housing programs, said the shortage of rental space "seems to be a problem even in provinces which are experiencing an outflow of population." Rental markets are especially tight in such cities as Saskatoon, Calgary and Toronto.

Developer Don Rosborough told Cosgrove that first-time homebuyers expect more amenities, such as garages, garbage dispoal units and dishwashers, in their first homes than older people.

"We're not talking about a housing problem, we're talking about an expectations problem," he said.

Father revives drowned son

Police said today a Saanich man's quick action saved the life of his 18-month-old son Sunday after the youngster was found unconscious in Prospect Lake.

Ferdinand Cumpelik found his son Leslie at edge of the lake.

The boy was not breathing.

Cumpelik, 34, began administering mouth-to-mouth rescusitation and the boy revived after about four minutes.

A search for Leslie was started after he vanished from his home at 5065 Prospect Lake Road late in the afternoon.

He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was checked and later released.

Anti-tax TV party

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new political party has appeared in British Columbia.

It's the TV Party — Taxpayers and Voters Party of B.C. — and it's dedicated to ending or lowering taxes, reducing government spending, cutting back government bureaucracy, ending immigration, eliminating all marketing boards, and regulating all financial institutions.

The TVP is running large ads in city newspapers stating that taxpayers and voters are tired of deficit spending, uncontrolled interest rates, rising prices and government arrogance.

The ad also says the average taxpayer works up to five months of the year just to pay government taxes so there are hundreds of millions of dollars available to build convention centres, cultural centres, stadiums and hotels. The TVP says that because of this, thousands of citizens are losing their homes and jobs.

The party also demands greater autonomy for B.C.

It says, if elected, it guarantees lower personal income taxes.

Bodies float as jet falls like stone

TORONTO (CP) — A baby flew through the air and screaming passengers bounced off the ceiling when an Air Canada jumbo jet dropped like a stone in a wind pocket Sunday.

"I looked down and my baby was flying off the seat," Lynda Dodd of Saskatoon said later. "I grabbed her and brought her back to me and held her tight."

Lennie Levitsky, whose wife Lynda needed five stitches to close a gash in her chin, said there was no warning for the 254 passengers and 18 crew of the plane, Toronto-bound from Miami, when it ran into sudden turbulence 12,000 metres over Jacksonville, Fla.

"It was just like an elevator, dropping without a stop," Levitsky said. "There was this sense of weightlessness.

"Bodies floated through the air. People bounced off the ceiling. I thought this was it — we were going to crash. It was a terrifying thing."

As a result of the freak accident, three passengers are in hospital and 42 others received minor injuries when everything loose — pillows, luggage, magazines — flew about the cabin.

Two doctors aboard found none had serious injuries and Air Canada flight 2913 landed on schedule at Toronto International Airport.

Five ambulances and airport limosines were waiting to take the injured to two hospitals.

All have been released except three — a woman with a fractured back, a woman with broken ribs and an elderly man with a heart condition — who are in satisfactory condition. Air Canada has not disclosed the names of the injured.

Levitsky said there was no warning of trouble as the plane climbed to gain altitude in the 500 kilometres from Miami to Jacksonville.

Then the plane plunged 300 to 600 metres in a matter of seconds before abruptly regaining stability. He said he would have been thrown to the ceiling if he hadn't had his seat belt buckled. When he looked for his wife, she wasn't in her seat.

"Lynda came down in another aisle about six feet away and the arm of the chair where she landed was bent in half by the impact," he said.

He said the most severe jolt was at the rear of the plane and that two stewardesses serving drinks from a wagon had been badly shaken up.

"One man who had been in the washroom told me he ended up standing on his head," Levitsky said.

John Cavill, a spokesman for Air Canada, said the plane hit clear-air turbulence, an atmospheric phenomenon that gives no warning and doesn't show up on radar.

He said there was no damage to the jet and officials would check the flight recorder box to determine how far it fell.

He said the captain decided to continue on to Toronto — rather that return to Miami or land at another airport — because there were no serious injuries.

Visual Ear soon on sale at Tel offices

A portable device which allows people with hearing and speech impairments to use telephones anywhere will be available from the B.C. Telephone Co., starting in May.

Known as a Visual Ear, it is compact and lightweight so that it can be easily carried. To place a call, the user dials the telephone number, puts the telephone handset in the Visual Ear's acoustic coupler and types a message on the keyboard.

At present, teletypewriters or other similar equipment can be connected to a telephone so that the phone can be used by the hard-of-hearing and those with speech impairments but such use is limited to that specially-equipped instrument.

Owners of a Visual Ear will be able to communicate with anyone else who has one, a teletypewriter or other similar device.

It will be sold for $350 a unit to people with a certified impairment and for $375 to others. The price includes a one-year warranty for parts and labor.

Orders will be taken at all B.C. Tel phone marts and customer service offices. After allowing two weeks for delivery, the unit may be picked up at the office where the order was placed.

Visual Ear is being made available by telephone companies across Canada.

Display of remains outrages U.S.

A spokesman for the Swiss Embassy said the embassy had not been officially asked to handle the transfer but would be glad to take on the job.

At Khalkahli's heavily guarded embassy news conference, reporters were shown a variety of American military equipment ranging from guns, maps, battle jackets, and a compass to individual identity cards of the dead servicemen.

The climax of the news conference came when militants with cloth over their faces unwrapped the remains from large canvas shrouds. Another student dragged in a large wooden box in which charred remains had been put. All were burnt beyond recognition.

Tehran state radio reported today that the first batch of American hostages had arrived in the city of Tabriz as part of the militants plan to spread the captives, held for 177 days, around Iran to prevent a second rescue bid.

One bomb blew up under a car in a central parking lot shattering shop windows, and destroyed 10 cars, turning the lot into a mass of twisted metal.

On the diplomatic front, western Europe's leaders muted their displeasure Sunday over the aborted U.S. rescue attempt and stood by their threat to impose economic sanctions against Iran on May 17 unless "decisive progress" is made toward freeing the hostages.

"There was unanimous solidarity with the position of the United States to release the hostages without harm," a British source said at the meeting of the EEC in Luxembourg Sunday.

Delegates at the EEC meeting were presented with a British suggestion Sunday for the possible summit meeting with President Carter and Prime Minister Trudeau to discuss the Iranian crisis, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and world energy problems, top British officials officials said.

2 lots, house may be sold

Two parcels of city-owned property in Fernwood will go up for sale soon if council endorses a recommendation from urban development officer Joe Elkin.

He suggests selling a house and lot at 1325 Pembroke with an upset price of $39,000, and advertising the single lot next door at an upset price of $34,000.

The city bought the two lots in 1977 for $75,000 as part of the Spring Ridge neighborhood improvement project, intending to make them a neighborhood mini-park but they were never developed because of a lack of funds.

The Cool-Aid hostel asked to use the house as overflow accommodation, but city council would not allow the society free use of the building. It offered the house and two lots to Cool-Aid for $75,000 but the group couldn't meet the asking price.

Elkin suggests splitting the two properties and rezoning the vacant lot for a duplex. The city would pay about $7,000 to relocate the services to the existing house, which now cross the vacant lot.

The proposal goes to council's land management committee Tuesday.

Construction pioneer dies

Victoria builder who gave physical form to the designs of such famous architects as Francis Mawsom Rattenbury, Sam Maclure and Percy Leonard James, died Sunday.

Born in England, E.J. Hunter started in business in Victoria in 1910. E.J. Hunter Construction Ltd. built the W.C. Nichol home, now The Latch restaurant in Sidney, the old Colwood Golf Club, now a nursing home, and the Cator home on Rockland, a Rattenbury design.

Hunter's sons Douglas and Gordon now run the firm.

Hunter is also survived by his wife, Constance, and daughter, Marilyn Carson, of Glendale, Calif.

Funeral service will be held at Hayward's Thomson and Irving, 1625 Quadra, at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Vance quits Carter cabinet

over for Vance as acting secretary of state.

Powell said Carter "expressed formally his inclination to move ahead" with the rescue attempt at a meeting with key advisers April 11. Vance was away in Florida on a weekend vacation, which he rarely took in 3½ years as secretary of state.

Asked why Vance had not been summoned back, Powell said it would have attracted too much attention in an operation that had to be kept secret.

However, Powell said, Carter and Vance had "extensive conversations" before the mission was actually launched during which Vance registered his differences.

In Canada, External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan said he is sorry to hear of the resignation.

MacGuigan said he has not met Vance's potential successor but added Christopher is well-known to officials in the external affairs department and well-versed in Canadian-U.S. relations.

Vance favored in most overseas ventures a careful approach based on compromise in preference to confrontation. His attitude was shaped partly by his background as a Wall Street lawyer and also the U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war, which Vance as deputy defence secretary first supported and then began to doubt.

Vance's style of quiet diplomacy appeared to be appreciated in allied capitals abroad and also in the Soviet Union, where he was seen as more understanding than Brzezinski. The European allies, traditionally sensitive to U.S. pressures, found in Vance one who they were confident would not forget their individual problems.

Christopher, the deputy secretary, has been increasingly prominent in state department affairs during recent months. He accompanied Brzezinski on a mission to Pakistan after the Soviets intervened in Afghanistan, and went to Europe seeking allied support for sanctions against Iran.

the weather

Rain fell most of the night on the north coast and northern Vancouver Island from a frontal system inching its way down the coast. Skies were generally clear east and west of the front until early this morning when a band of convective clouds moved from Washington into the lower mainland giving a few showers. Isolated thundershowers were reported in this area of clouds which is moving towards the southern interior. Extremely warm temperatures will occur again today in the interior while the coast will be cooler under cloudy skies and in the cooler air behind the frontal system. This system will continue inland and dissipate on Tuesday with another ridge of high pressure building onto the coast behind it.

Farmers are squealing as pigs go to market

Pet of the week

NEED A FRIEND? This one-year-old male terrier cross is longing for a family where his affection and high spirits will be appreciated. Meanwhile, however, he's on his own and languishing in the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter at 3150 Napier Lane, 388-6627.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fraser Valley farmer Jack Reams drove 40 pigs to market last week and didn't make a cent. He lost nearly $2,000.

But lately, that's nothing new.

Reams is one of many British Columbia farmers facing problems that may put some of them out of business and could send food prices up.

Most serious is the high interest rate on borrowed money — and nearly every farmer borrows money.

Then there are falling prices of many farm products, rising prices for necessities such as fertilizer and machinery, tough competition from the U.S., high freight rates and increasing foreign ownership of B.C. farmland.

This year, for economic reasons, many B.C. farmers will likely reduce the amount of land they plant and the livestock they raise.

As a result, B.C. consumers will have to rely more heavily on produce imported from the U.S. And that will probably mean more expensive food as U.S. farmers face many of the same problems as Canadians.

The hog sector is the most depressed in the B.C. industry, says B.C. Federation of Agriculture president Don Knoer.

He said pig farmers are getting about 45 cents a pound for pork that costs them almost 73 cents a pound to produce.

Knoer said the fact that Reams is losing money on his pigs is proof that the pork market is in bad shape because Reams is one of the most successful farmers in the business. He also is president of the B.C. Pork Producers Association and owns, with his partner Ross Husdon, four farms in the Fraser Valley area east of Vancouver and a swine breeding management consulting firm.

The two men started R and H Farms with $20,000 and turned it into the largest independent pig operation in the province, worth between $1.75 million and $2 million.

Despite this, the farm is slow to show much profit, Reams said.

"We've never made enough money to pay income tax — any profit we make is plowed right back into the business. Even in the good years we've not had to pay income tax," he said.

Although Reams is losing money on his pigs, pork prices have not dropped much.

"However, I don't think the supermarkets are price gouging because they are so labor intensive," he said. "You can't run the supermarket or the slaughterhouse with any fewer people."

Last year, 110 million pigs were produced in North America. Of those, 11 million came from Canada and 150,000 from B.C.

Produce boycott eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The fledgling Canadian Farmworkers Union will boycott B.C. fruit and produce to get labor agreements with farmers, a spokesman said Sunday.

Boycotts would be one of the weapons "if farmers feel they don't want to negotiate," union president Raj Chouhan said. "We don't want to hurt anyone, but if they force us we may have to call for a boycott."

The union would have the support of organized labor, students and other groups, Chouhan said.

He said the union, formed April 6, is establishing a base membership of 1,550 and hopes to convince most of the 9,000 farm workers in the Lower Mainland to join.

More than 600 persons gathered at a founding celebration Sunday to hear Chouhan and Cesar Chavez, president of the United Farm Workers of America.

Chouhan said Chavez told the group that it is in the farmers' best interests to negotiate with the union.

Youth hooking tackled

VANCOUVER (CP) — The province and the city will jointly hire a special co-ordinator to direct the efforts of police and social workers fighting juvenile prostitution in the city's West End, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Sunday.

She said in an interview she expected the co-ordinator to be appointed sometime next week.

But the battle against juvenile prostitution must involve amendments to federal juvenile legislation, said Mrs. McCarthy.

She would not elaborate on specific changes she would recommend because "the act is so old it needs a total renovation."

Health care report useful: Mair

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Health Minister Rafe Mair says the recent federal report on health care at Alert Bay is devastating but should help his ministry solve health problems faced by the residents.

Mair said Sunday the report underlines problems his ministry had known about, although he is not sure all the recommendations should be implemented.

The report, by Dr. Gary Goldthorpe of Sioux Lookout, Ont., says Alert Bay's only physician, Dr. Jack Pickup, is an alcoholic and in need of treatment.

The report, released Friday, blames Dr. Pickup in the deaths of three Indian patients, including an 11-year-old girl who died of a ruptured appendix.

Police 'force' being probed

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — An RCMP internal investigator has begun an inquiry into allegations that police here have used excessive force in making arrests.

Sgt. Ron Nassichuk of Vancouver was sent to Fort St. John after detachment head S.-Sgt. Des Johnston received eight written complaints given to him by MP Frank Oberle (PC — Prince George-Peace River).

PROFITS AT WORK
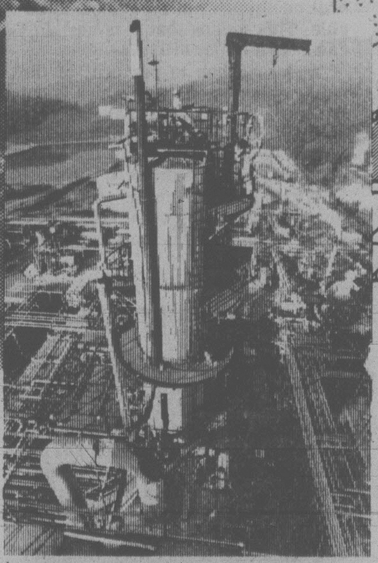
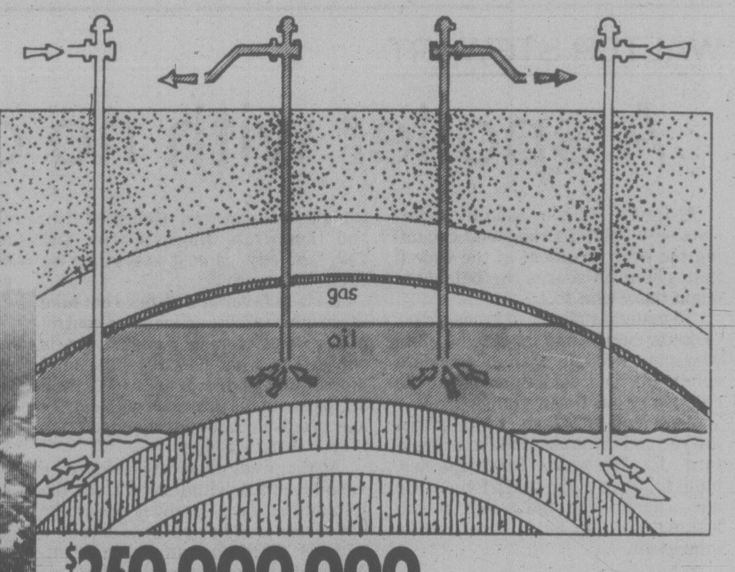
PROFITS MAKE THIS POSSIBLE

$400,000,000
This is what Imperial will spend in exploration for new energy supplies in 1980. Drillers like Eldun Tegler are working hard to find near term supplies of oil and gas in Western Canada. Much of the investment will be accounted for by this activity; the remainder will finance exploration towards long term Canadian energy security.



$150,000,000
This investment covers a wide variety of projects. For example in 1980 we will be both improving pollution controls and significantly reducing energy consumption at all our refineries.



$250,000,000
This will be Imperial's investment in maintaining and improving production from existing wells. For example, we are using a variety of methods to squeeze more oil out of old wells; it's technically complex and very expensive.

$150,000,000
Imperial will spend this in the development of Alberta's oil sands. The projects are massive and demand complex new technology. At Cold Lake, for example, high pressure steam is used to remove the bitumen-like substance from deep in the ground. When completed this project will cost a staggering $7 billion.

$50,000,000
In 1980 this is what Imperial will invest in its continued search for minerals and alternative energy sources, such as coal and uranium. Geologists like Bonnie Lowe spend a good deal of their time prospecting for uranium in the wilds of Northern Ontario.

When you think new energy, think billions.
Imperial is investing heavily in Canada to develop new energy supplies. In fact, over the next decade our investment could total $15 billion. Without profits it would be impossible to make this kind of investment in Canada's energy future.

Avoid the 'catch-up'

Every time there is a 'catch-up' wage settlement, somebody is likely to face adverse economic repercussions — a company and consumers in the case of a private industry settlement, the taxpayers in a public sector settlement.

B.C.'s 27,000 registered nurses, for example, have been offered a 44 per cent wage increase because their salaries have not kept up with the cost of living over the past 10 years. The increase is so large that the provincial health ministery is scrambling to find ways of covering the anticipated budget shortfall.

The experience of the nurses settlement should act as a reminder to the provincial government that it cannot indefinitely delay a review of the B.C. minimum wage.

Firms (there were 1,029 in 1972) which employ several thousand low-wage earners might be happy with the current salary scale of $3 an hour. It's been at that level since 1975. Considering increases in the cost of living, five years is a long time to go without an increase.

Minimum wages across Canada average about 45 per cent of average hourly earnings in each province. In B.C. the minimum wage has dropped to 37 per cent of the average wage. It's the lowest percentage level in 10 years.

Some economists argue that the minimum wage should be lower not higher. They say that it has worked against the largest group of unemployed: unskilled young people who have dropped out of school.

The argument goes that because of higher minimum wages, employers hire fewer people. This leaves a larger number of young people unemployed and unable to acquire work experience that would qualify them for higher paying jobs.

A number of holes can be poked in that argument, but the essential point is that if no action is taken soon by the B.C. government, the day will arrive when a huge catch-up will be necessary — probably around election time. That could cause far more difficulties to small businesses than would gradual increases every year or two.

In the case of the nurses, wage negotiators were accused of being asleep at the wheel in allowing nurses' salaries to slip so far behind the cost of living. The provincial government is the negotiator for minimum wage earners. At the moment it too appears to be dozing.

Cure might be worse

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm says he is working on changes to improve land-use planning procedures for municipalities, regional districts and the provincial government itself.

That is good news. Such changes are certainly needed.

As he proceeds, however, Vander Zalm will have to ensure that the cure he creates is not worse than the disease. Some of the vague suggestions he made during a weekend interview sound a bit ominous.

In particular, he suggested that municipalities might be relegated to "detailed work" in planning and zoning procedures, while the provincial government itself will paint a "broad-brush" picture for each region of the province. The minister did not attempt to draw the line between detailed work and broad-brush pictures, but the idea of the provincial government saying, even in the broadest possible terms, how a municipality should use its land does not seem sound.

One of the chief problems with regional planning is that many citizens and individual area representatives believe the regional board is too remote to understand their unique needs. This problem would be magnified enormously if the decision-maker were to be a civil servant responsible to the centralized government of Victoria. And if Capital Regional District residents don't much like The Stone Castle being in charge of their planning, imagine the reaction of people living in more remote areas of the province.

Such a process would also reduce significantly the opportunity for area residents to have a say in planning their community. The existing process may be overly-long and subject to pressure from interest groups, but it preserves local democracy. It would be extremely difficult for a similar procedure to be devised if the province were the decision-maker.

To devise a planning process that will be both democratic and relatively efficient will not be easy. In his work, however, Vander Zalm should ensure that local democracy is not sacrificed on the altar of efficiency.

Folk spirit of nationhood

When he proposed a working alliance of some kind between the Liberal and New Democratic parties Prime Minister Trudeau might have recalled a famous dictum uttered long ago but more relevant than ever in our time.

Viscount James Bryce, a British statesman of the late nineteenth century, published a classic book on North American politics and of Canada he wrote: "Party seems to exist for its own sake. In Canada ideas are not needed to make parties, for these can live by heredity and, like the Guelfs and Ghibellines of medieval Italy, by memories of past combats."

Regrettably, this is an accurate description of Mr. Trudeau's problem, and the nation's today. We have no truly national party when it is most needed and the Canadian people's work of more than three centuries is suddenly in peril.

Sarcastic rejection

Even heredity, memories, and combats are not enough to recreate such a party. And when Mr. Trudeau tries to invent it, by embracing the NDP, Edward Broadbent rejects the offer with ponderous sarcasm.

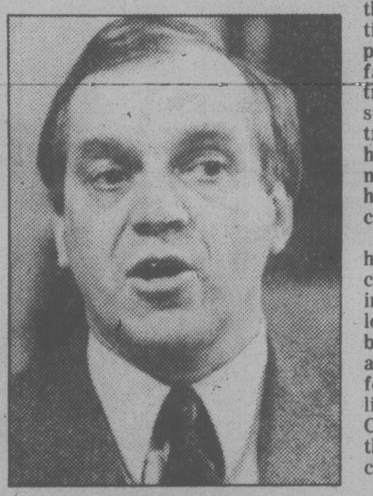
The once great national parties have disintegrated and are geographically split because neither has been able to conceive a distinct policy, much less a philosophy, sufficient for the needs of these changing and dangerous times. But Mr. Trudeau's latest gambit was interesting and significant as reflecting the inner thoughts of a prime minister who seldom reveals them.

That he seeks NDP support in the West, where Liberalism has little or none, is natural. That he would like to absorb and tame the radical element of politics, as Mackenzie King digested the farmers' Progressive party, is logical. And that he himself stands to the left of the political fulcrum is obvious.

After all, he has said, in a rare flash of candor, that the market system no longer works as in earlier times and that a "new" society is emerging. So it is, by gradual and clumsy instalments. Though nobody can yet see more than its rough outlines (with hope or horror), at least we can see Mr. Trudeau's general direction, his strategy conscious and sub-conscious, his advances and retreats.

An extraordinary man, a creature sui generis and quite unpredictable, is moving his government and the nation gingerly but definitely leftward while the United States, next door, is moving rightward and both its potential presidents are conservatives, regardless of their party lables.

Mr. Trudeau might reply, if you asked him, that the motion in Canada is not his but the anonymous current of history, that he is an agent, not an instigator. However that may be, his zig-zag course should not surprise us.



ED BROADBENT
. . . snubbed PM's invitation

In his youth he was a declared and active socialist (in principle anyhow), a wealthy heretic of minority causes who bitterly denounced the conservatism of the Liberal party. As he later wrote: "The only constant factor to be found in my thinking over the years has been opposition to accepted opinions."

Brave words, but he has drastically modified his own opinions since leaving the comfortable ivory tower of academe for the hard realities of power. Thus in the autumn of 1978 he announced an economic reversal of 180 degrees, a policy of restraint, orthodox finance, and eventually balanced budgets. He even confessed, in a forgotten New York speech, that his government had tried to do too much, too fast, with all too familiar results.

If the older and perhaps wiser of many different Trudeaus has shed some youthful illusions he is still a rebel at heart, a rebel against the injustice of society, the human situation everywhere. But his own situation has been totally changed by events that he did not foresee when he assured us that Quebec separatism was "dead" a few months before Rene Levesque arrived in office and planned Canada's destruction.

Through the accidents of politics and Mr. Trudeau's curious talents he finds himself — and we all find ourselves — at the most critical moment, the decisive crossroads of our collective experience. That is why, with his political success and his economic failure, the prime minister now bestrides the nation like a revived colossus as few predecessors ever bestrode it, man and history meeting. In his cabinet he sees no challenger and no visible heir. He is 10 times, or a hundred times, more equal than any colleague.

In the Canadian crisis, however, his personal fortunes are of small account compared to the forces moving in Quebec and the angry West. We no longer face some recurring quarrel between parties and persons, classes and interest groups. We face, in new form the oldest issue of our national life — whether, in fact, the whole Canadian experiment, which most of the world envies, is to continue or collapse.

Ill prepared

For the test ahead of us we are ill prepared. As a people we have failed to grasp the nature, risk, and consequence of decisions that we must make, or begin to make, in the next year or two. Nor has Mr. Trudeau been able, so far, to rekindle the instinct and folk spirit that built the nation and alone can preserve it, as mere political arrangements cannot.

That is his task inherited, against all probability, from the original builders. Whether he is fitted for it we don't know yet. We don't even know our own minds. Hence come two questions: Has a lop-sided electoral majority of Canadians overestimated Mr. Trudeau? More important, has he overestimated them? Before long we shall learn the answer.

WALTER STEWART

A spoiler with no chance

WASHINGTON — John B. Anderson doesn't stand a chance of becoming the next president of the United States, but he scares the bejabbers out of those who do.

To understand why, it is necessary to know something about the man who announced he is an independant candidate, and something about the election he has thrown into a tizzy.

Anderson is a lean, white-haired lawyer and congressman from Rockford, Ill. He wears large glasses, blunt features and a sharp tongue. He has a deep voice and a thin, mean-looking upper lip, but he is not a mean man at all.

Sincerity plus

What he is, is sincere.

He was sincere when he backed Barry Goldwater in 1964, and ranged the nation lambasting the communists and other lefties. He was sincere when, as chairman of the House of Representatives republican conference (a job he held for a decade, 1969-79), he marshalled support for Presidents Nixon and Ford.

He was sincere when he won the unstinting praise of the Americans for Constitutional Action, a group somewhere to the right of George III. The ACA billed him as one of the most conservative members of Congress, a stalwert against "the permissive society."

But then, gosh darn it, he was also sincere when he changed his mind and moved left. He came out for open housing, freer abortion laws, the equal rights amendment, the Panama Canal Treaty, and the ratification of SALT II.

Now the ACA won't speak his name, but the Americans for Democratic Action, the moderate left group has shifted his rating from 0 in 1961 to 55 in 1978, which is not bad for a life-long Republican.

What happened, Anderson says, was that he saw a conflict between his politics and his religion. He is a born-again Christian, and religion won the toss.

In 1968, he cast the deciding vote on an open housing bill — to the horror of conservatives because "there came to bear in my thinking the realization that as a Christian I had to be willing to give up age-old prejudices."

There is nothing as uncomfortable in politics as a man willing to take his lumps — and Anderson did, because of a mere matter of principle — unless it is a man willing to change his mind on the basis of new evidence.

Anderson is an embarrassment to the real candidates, Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush, and Democrats Jimmy Carter and Ted Kennedy, almost everytime he opens his mouth.

He is in favor of a 50-per-cent hike in gasoline prices, an incomes control policy, and women's rights. He is opposed to what he calls "the mad momentum of the arms race." And he spells out his positions with clarity and precision, an underhanded trick if ever there was one.

At the press conference where he announced his withdrawal from the Republican race — which he said he had discovered he could never win — and his rebirth as an independant, Anderson injected a certain amount of apple sauce into the proceedings.

He had just learned, as every candidate does, that the U.S. faces a grave crisis which, by happy coincidence, only he can meet.

At the same time, he enunciated his standard liberal positions, then backed them with his fundamentally conservative creed, calling for "a new ethic of sacrifice and sharing, of conserving and saving."

The problem he poses is that, as he told the press conference, about half the U.S. voters are so dismayed by the presidential choices they face that they plan to stay home in November.

Americans have been turning out at elections in smaller and smaller proportions with longer and longer faces since 1960.

In 1976, a bare 53 per cent of eligible voters went to the polls. A man can get elected by raking in just over one-quarter of the ballots available. This means that a minor shift can have a major effect.

Anderson has 18 per cent of the public opinion polls vote which is not the same thing as the real vote, nor enough to do much with for himself. It is, however, enough to tip the scale against one of the others.

With a low turnout, the switch of a few thousand votes in key states could swing first the states and then the presidency.

Draw support

Conventional wisdom has it that this spoiler effct will work against Carter or Kennedy, because Anderson will draw his support from the moderate left. That may be so, but Anderson is, and remains a Republican. There is a good chance that many Republicans who can't stomach Reagan or Bush and don't want to desert the Grand Old Party will go for Anderson.

If they do, its anybody's ball game.

Anderson says that if everything goes right, the election could be tied and thrown into the House of Representatives, where he might well emerge as President.

It's possible — just as it's possible to spin a coin and land it on the edge — possible but not likely.

Victoria Landmarks

The explosion of the steamer Cariboo in Victoria Harbor wakened the town on August 2, 1861.

She'd left the Hudson's Bay wharf with eight passengers, 35 tons of freight, 11 head of livestock and, Shoal Point rounded, was heading for the outer harbor when the explosion occurred. Captain Jamieson was killed. So was his brother, the assistant engineer.

The small bell on the Hudson's Bay wharf gave an instant alarm, followed by the hook and ladder bell. Three Italian fishing boats, and canoes from the Indian encampment headed towards the Cariboo now floating eastward on a falling tide. The intact steering wheel was found far from the wreck. Small boats towed the wreck to a nearby cove. The steamer Caledonia reached the wreck at four o'clock.

In Victoria, flags were at half-mast that day and conversation centred on the disaster.

The newspaper's August 3rd issue, giving 3 columns to this explosion and the seven lives lost, is on microfilm at the Provincial Archives.

New scenario

I think small is beautiful and I wish those blokes from the mainland would leave us in peace.

There's that 'think big' cabinet minister, Dr. McGeer from Vancouver. He wants to build a bridge-tunnel and what-have-you between here and perdition. He says we must start right away, because the diesel for the ferries is going up something fierce and soon we won't be able to afford to run them (seems fuel for cars is OK because Bennett and Alberta are going to subsidize it). McGeer says too if we don't start the tunnel and stuff right away, they will become more expensive because at the rate we and the government are spending, inflation is going to get worse. McGeer ought to know, he's a big-wig professor.

Then there's Jack Davis — he's a Rhodes scholar, an MLA and a heck of a brain, but he says McGeer is all wet. Davis says we should build 10 new superduper mega-ferries, with enough room for everyone now in B.C., Washington and California, and then after 10 years or so build a tunnel, bridge or whatever because by that time there will be more cars and fuel for everyone. Davis says by doing things his way we'll save lots of money. I never did understand new maths.

Another in this conspiracy is a guy called Bawlf. He's not an MLA or civil servant, but he fixed up the Crystal palace just fine, so maybe he's the guy who will build the missing link into a fixed link. Well, he's bound to make it look good at any rate.

Now this Bawlf guy says that the tunnels and bridges and what have you will only cost about $2 to $5 billion — that's just one dollar from every person whose eaten at McDonalds. He figures that in about 15 years (providing there's no interest) both the bridge-tunnels what-have-you and the Crystal will be paid off and after that it will be all pure profit going into a great big Heritage Fund. I bet after that it's a tunnel to Seattle because there'll be lots and lots of construction guys lying around doing nothing but getting drunk on UIC benefits.

The only guy across the way who makes any sense to me is the mayor of New Westminster. The mayor says we should get all the MLAs out of the legislative building in Victoria and into the old, now empty, federal penitentiary.

The mayor says most of the people traveling on our ferries are MLAs and civil servants and if we moved the capital from Victoria to New Westminster we'd never need a bridge-tunnel what-have-you. We wouldn't need much in the way of ferries either. The Queen of Asbestos could handle the lot except in tourist season when we could call in a couple of hydrofoils.

The mayor says the action and population are in the lower mainland and if the capital were moved there, a better tab could be kept on our politicians. For any who get queer ideas, well Riverview is nice and handy.

If the capital is moved, Victoria will have a great big heritage building to do what it likes with — another museum? More boutiques? Juvenile detention home? Extended-care facility? Convention centre? Sally Ann hostel? — well I hand it to you, it's something to bawlf around with.— Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

To volunteers

One behalf of the Victoria Volunteer Bureau and the many voluntary agencies and organizations, I would like to thank all volunteers in the Victoria area who help to make our community and the quality of life better by their considerate contributions of time, skills and service.

We would also like to encourage all those people who may have entertained the thought of volunteering to get involved — now is just the right time! — Donald A. Shaw, President, Victoria Volunteer Bureau.

Stings and scams

"That cove is too fly," confided the English thief in his argot; "he's been stung before." In J.H. Vaux's Flash Dictionary, published in 1812, that language was translated as "That man is on his guard; he has already been trick'd."

An earlier slang lexicographer, Capt. Frances Grose, defined a "stingbum" in 1788 as "a niggard," a miser. Late in the 19th century, the meaning of "sting," as both verb and noun, shifted to simple thievery when it travelled to the United States. George Henderson's 1924 Keys to Crookdom cited this example: "Sting him for his rocks — steal his diamonds."

Then the element of trickery took over. A "sting" became the name of a small but successful confidence game; among tramps, it was a nice case of defrauding while begging. The word was popularized outside the petty rackets by David Ward, a screenwriter who wrote the 1973 movie The Sting, starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford as a pair of con men in the 30s.

" 'Sting' is standard con-man lingo," Ward informs me. "It's when the 'mark' hands over the money. The 'mark' is the stingee, the one who's stung."

However, the notion of a sting as a large-scale fraudulent enterprise — as depicted in the movie, and — as life followed art — by the FBI in 1976 and 1980 — is disputed by an anonymous underworld source, who recently told slanguist Stuart Berg Flexner: "The operation in the movie was a big operation — too big to be a sting. The movie should have been called 'Wire Game,' which is a big con game." The shifty source added, " 'Scam' and 'sting' are underworld slang for small-time illegal operations for very little money. Small con games."

"Scam" has a simpler history. The word was spawned at carnivals, where games of chance were rigged to fleece customers. Some say it may have come from "scamp's game"; others point to the word's possible origin as a variant of "shame," but that's all guesswork — no pre-carny citations have been found.

"Abscam" is the FBI code name for "Arab Scam"; the operation to catch corrupt officials was called a "sting," in its movie-usage sense of a large confidence game. Neither "sting" nor "scam" will ever be small potatoes anymore; the meaning is now fixed as a large-scale operation, complete with video recording.

Another word has been coined at the FBI in connection with this headline-making endeavor: "pro-active" investigations. FBI Director William Webster says he has been forced to choose between "reactive" law enforcement — responding after a bank has been robbed — and "pro-active" enforcement, in which his men are in on the planning stages of a crime. Others would use "provocative," rather than "pro-active," as a more accurate antonym to "reactive."

Lawyers for the "marks" will be using a few words and phrases that students of the sting-and-scam lexicon should become familiar with. "Entrapment," first used in 1597 to mean "catch by artifice," means in law the inducement by the police of an otherwise disinclined party to commit a crime concocted by the government. The key is whether the trapped person was "predisposed" to commit the crime.

Some civil libertarians will add that the ensnared and highly publicized "stingees," in screenwriter Ward's useful word, have been denied "due process." That's an example of a couple of lacklustre words combining to form a majestic phrase — the barrier keeping kings and lawmen from arbitrarily snatching away the liberties of citizens.

"Due process" first appears in the United States Constitution in the Fifth Amendment, bottomed on the Virginia Declaration of Rights, which traces its heritage to the 1354 statute of King Edward III: "That no man of what estate or condition that he be, shall be put out of land or Tenement, nor taken, nor imprisoned, nor disinherited, nor put to Death, without being brought to Answer by due Process of the Law." Since that great day, many coves have been too fly to get stung by the fuzz.

Downhill

"The meanings of the terms 'uphill' and 'downhill' have always confused me," writes Eleanor Gruber of Ridgewood, N.J. "Although the downhill direction represents ease, one is said to be a failure when he 'goes downhill.' Yet I have heard the phrase, 'It's an uphill struggle,' meaning a difficult struggle, as well as the phrase, 'It's all downhill from now on,' meaning, 'Easy!' "

Mrs. Gruber, you came to the right place. Writing this column has been downhill all the way.

According to the aforementioned Grose's Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue, "downhills" and "uphills" are gambling terms: "downhills" is when dice are loaded to bring out a low, or down, number, and "uphills" is when the dice are loaded to come out high. This has no bearing whatever on Mrs. Gruber's query, but I hate to waste good research.

More to the point: "uphill" offers no confusion. It means "the hard way." Whether you say, "It's an uphill struggle," or, "It's going to be uphill from now on," that means you're in for a real character builder. No easy answers — even the questions will be hard. You have a challenge ahead; "Nobody ever drowned in his own sweat," and all that.

"Downhill" is a different story. "To go downhill" is to decline, in business or in life. When a relationship does downhill, it's splitsville. (Does anybody have a good replacement for "relationship"? There's a word going downhill.) When "go" is the verb near "downhill," the news is bad; use Jack 'n' Jill for a mnemonic.

However, "downhill," without the "go" — as in "From here on, it's downhill all the way" — probably means, "Now it's going to be easy," and may have its origin in skiing (many skiers find it easier skiing downhill than up). In a nutshell, to "go" downhill is to decline — especially if followed by "all the way" — but to "be" downhill is to be sailing along easily. Understanding the difference is uphill.

Mondegreens

The human ear hears words in its own way, not necessarily the way the human voice intends. This results in "mondegreens," inspired by "Lady Mondegreen," a phrase of ancient poetry that was originally "laid him on the green."

Sometimes sound-alikes are easily spotted as errors. In "Winners & Sinners," an occasional roundup of sparklers and duds put out from the news desk of The New York Times, a few were recently identified: "Joan Blondell was eulogized yesterday as a 'real trooper' . . ." The correction was trouper, a French variant that puts a troop into showbiz. "The fact that there was no model home to look at did not phase Charles and Martha Papa." The correction was faze, a variant of "feeze." Finally: "I honestly don't think that Joan Kennedy has to be put through the ringer" was corrected to wringer, because that "wring" has an etymology meaning "bend" and is also the root of "worm." (Without a "W," "ringer" in slang use is a horse clandestinely substituted for another in a race; a second use might be a person who says, "Why don't you get your husband to throw his hat in the ring, Mrs. Kennedy?")

When far from an office, I dictate my copy over the telephone to a machine in the recording room of The Times; a human transcriber of uncanny accuracy then takes my shouted transmission from Nanjing or wherever and types it into the computer that sets type. Mondegreens can be expected, but occasionally human error is creative enough to produce neologisms.

While rapping President Carter's rhetorical activism in the face of his "demonstrated pacifism," I was stunned to see "pacifism" appear as "passive-ism." Since that word better expressed my thought, and appeared to be a brilliant play on "pacifism," I said nothing and continued to use the mondegreen as my own invention.

Months later, I yelled "foolhardily" into a bad connection, and next day read the word "foolheartedly" in my column. Before I could grumble, a colleague who has never been one of my fans came by to say he admired the portmanteau coinage — "the way you combined 'foolhardy' with 'wholeheartedly.'" Right; not for me to foolheartedly complain.

A simple solution

Blame it all on government

THE WASHINGTON POST

Among his supporters, Ronald Reagan is knocking'em dead over the economic issue. The former California governor is smooth — a polished and aggressive speaker and uncompromisingly conservative.

His message, by any standard, is disarmingly simple: The economy is in the shape it's in almost entirely because of the federal government.

"Very simply," the 69-year-old GOP front-runner told a fund-raising crowd recently in Baton Rouge, La., "what all of us have to realize is, government causes inflation and government can make it go away." (Sustained applause.)

Very simply, he asserts, discussing the energy problem: "Here again, just like inflation, it is government that is responsible . . . The answer . . . is to get the government out of the energy industry." (More applause.)

Very simply, Reagan says, "the American people today are overtaxed, overregulated and overgoverned." (Still more applause.)

The audience, on that occasion, was Southern, mostly Republican, middle to upper middle class, and virtually all white. But, as shown already in spring primary results, the theme likely would draw cheering from many Northern Democrats as well.

When Reagan ran for president in 1976, many Democrats — and some Republicans as well — seemed almost to fear his economic and energy proposals, often viewing them as Draconian and out of step with mainstream America.

The Californian was conspicuously alone then in proposing the transfer of $90 billion in federal social programs back to the states, a 23 per cent tax cut and a sharp rise in defence spending. It even made some conservatives nervous.

But today, the electorate's mood has shifted enough — and Reagan himself has tempered his statements enough — that, in the eyes of many voters, his stark conservative rhetoric now seems downright upright.

The former actor's call for sharp cuts in domestic programs, for a steep boost in military outlays and for new tax incentives for business investment all have been endorsed, to some degree, by leaders of both parties.

Moreover, Reagan, in person, isn't nearly the fearsome ideologue that some of his detractors paint him. Although the governor has some strong conservative views, he doesn't come across as a zealot. If anything, he's a Mr. Nice Guy.

But for all the new respectability that Reagan's economic proposals are receiving this year, the governor still has serious problems in coping with the economic issue on several fronts:

- Although Reagan still can wow his audiences with hard-hitting speeches blaming government for all the economy's ills, he's unable — or unwilling — under questioning, to provide specifics for any of his key proposals.

- He steadfastly refuses to say how much he would trim spending, which social programs he'd cut, or how much he would boost defence. The latter decision "should be made for you by your possible opponent (the Soviet Union)," he asserts.

- While some of his stances — such as the $90 billion spending-cut proposal — have been tempered, there still are some glaring inconsistencies in what Reagan is proposing. For example, the string of tax cuts the governor is advocating would add up to $46.3 billion in fiscal 1981 and a massive $293.3 billion a year by fiscal 1985 — more than enough to erase the projected $158.6 billion surplus. With that kind of red-ink figure, a Reagan administration would have to slice spending by $134.7 billion or more just to bring the budget back into balance — almost 10 times the cuts President Carter now is proposing.

Reagan's response is simply to shrug that he'd phase in his tax cuts "piecemeal" as the budget permitted. But few analysts — even those backing these same proposals — believe the budget could stand them all anytime soon.

The Reagan economic prescription now is virtually the same as it was in 1976: shrink the size of the government by cutting back on social programs and freezing federal job levels, and keep it small by limiting taxes to a specific percentage of the gross national product.

REAGAN . . . knocks 'em dead

In one of his more controversial proposals, the governor would repeal the minimum wage, or at least provide a lower minimum wage for teenagers, and would abolish or reduce federal regulations affecting business.

The former California governor also has added a new wrinkle to his economic program this year: He's considering endorsing a return to the gold standard, which the United States left initially in 1934 and abandoned permanently in 1973.

As a package, the Californian's proposals aren't all that frightening, at least in today's context. For one thing, backers point out, at least he has a definite economic framework. Carter often is criticized for not having any.

Pope waffles

By LOUIS B. FLEMING

ROME — New questions are being asked in the Vatican about the policies of Pope John Paul II toward Latin America after his cool response to the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero of El Salvador.

There had been disagreement within the Vatican regarding the activist role for social reform played by the archbishop. Both the apostolic nuncio in El Salvador and the cardinal of neighboring Guatemala are thought to have worked to weaken his influence toward reform. And there is evidence that the U.S. government also sought Vatican co-operation in muzzling the outspoken prelate.

This may have accounted for the fact that the pope, in his first two responses to the March 24 assassination, lamented the violence but had not one good word to say for the archbishop.

In fact, the only adjective employed in the initial response was to call Romero "zealous" in a telegram of condolence sent to the Salvadoran bishops. This word is not regarded as a compliment in Vatican circles, even though in times past it was a quality extolled in the saints.

The pope had shown similar ambivalence regarding church activism last year when he attended the conference of Latin America bishops at Puebla during a visit to Mexico.

Most observers at the Puebla conference came away with the feeling that the pope was firmly committed to social reform, even if he had grave doubts about political activisim by the clergy and some of the means adopted in the name of the so-called theology of liberation.

Stock guru speaks and market listens

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — After the close of the stock market last Monday, the staff of a Holly Hill, Fla., organization began making telephone calls.

By about 2 a.m. the following morning, they had passed the word to about 1,500 people: "Cover your short sales — market to turn up."

Joseph Granville, market guru and head of a multi-million-dollar empire built on investment advice, had suddenly turned from bearish to bullish on the outlook for stock prices.

Granville's message to subscribers who take his "early warning service," which costs a cool $500 a year, recommended purchase of eight stocks by name.

The next day, amid a strong rally by the general stock market, those stocks fared as follows: General Dynamics, up $5.37; Honeywell, up $5.75; Hughes Tool, up $5.75; International Paper, up $3.37; Mobil, up $3.12; Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing, up $2.75; Owens-Illinois, up $2.37, and Norfolk and Western, up $1.75.

Clearly, the people on the receiving end of those telephone calls listened to the message, and acted on it. Some of them were themselves stock brokers who relayed it to their customers, and in short order reports that "Joe Granville turned bullish" spread throughout Wall Street.

Granville is as controversial as he can be influential. On tour — he averages two speaking appearances a week from September through June, says his son, Blanchard Granville — he is anything but the usual image of a staid investment adviser.

He uses puppets and ringing bells to punctuate his presentations, and has just come up with a song he calls The Bagholder Blues to dramatize a recurring theme in his market letter:

"The market is a game and a game implies winners and losers," he says. "Somebody always has to be on the losing side of the equation, and those people are the bagholders. Somebody always has to hold the bag."

One Wall Streeter who has known Granville for years describes him as "a snake charmer, almost a Billy Graham type. He can talk for three hours and keep you mesmerized.

"He has made, I have to say, some contributions to the art of technical analysis. He's also an extremely good promoter."

Just how good? Blanchard Granville says the Granville Market Letter, which goes for $250 a year, has about 11,000 subscribers, including the 1,500 or so who pay extra for the "early warning service." A little arithmetic suggests that the letter and service together gross something more than $3 million a year.

The market letter reaches many other people who don't pay for it, thanks to the magic of office copiers. Granville, who is naturally unhappy about that, has taken to printing it in exotic paper-and-ink color combinations to discourage the duplicating, but some copying machines aren't so easily foiled.

Seagram sells TexPac lands

MONTREAL (CP) — Sun Co. Inc. of Radnor, Pa., and Seagram Co. Ltd. of Montreal have signed an agreement under which Sun will purchase, for $2.3 billion (U.S.) the United States properties of Texas Pacific Oil Co., a wholly-owned Seagram subsidiary.

Sun and Seagram announced jointly that closing of the sale is expected to occur between Aug. 29 and Nov. 30. At closing, Sun will pay Seagram $1.8 billion in floating rate notes and $500 million in cash.

Theodore Burtis, chairman and chief executive officer of Sun, and Edgar Bronfman, who holds similar positions with Seagram, signed the agreement in the Seagram boardroom.

"There is a time to buy and a time to sell," Bronfman said at a news conference soon after the signing. "We re not primarily in the oil business, and the inventory is more important to an integrated oil company than to an independent producer."

Sun has been regarded by some analysts as being short of reserves, and Burtis said the purchase of the Texas Pacific properties "should improve our reserve position and bolster our exploration properties.

Asked whether Seagram had any plans for the $2.3 billion it will receive from the sale, Bronfman said there were no plans at the moment, but the board would meet soon to discuss this.

"We have to do one thing at a time," he said. "This may seem like bad planning, but the Sun offer took us by surprise. They were very brave and courageous, and somewhat pre-emptive."

Hibernia yield unlikely by '86, Mobil man says

CALGARY (CP) — East Coast operators will be hard pressed to bring oil on stream from the Hibernia discovery by 1986 even if adequate reserves are found, says a Mobil Oil Canada Ltd.'s engineering manager.

Don Bester said it is difficult to predict when the oil will start moving because of technical problems, required environmental studies and political jurisdictional disputes between Newfoundland and the federal government.

Bester, speaking to the Engineering Institute of Canada, said his company should know next year if Hibernia is large enough to justify commercial development.

But bringing the field, located in the Grand Banks area off the east coast of Newfoundland, into production by 1985-86 would require "very ambitious" steps, he said.

He said the discovery well produced more than 20,000 barrels a day of high-quality light oil. To be commercial, the field must contain a minimum 500 million barrels of reserves with a production rate of 100,000 barrels a day or more.

Two follow-up wells are being drilled and, along with a couple more, would provide a fair assessment of whether the field is commercial. One of the follow-up wells was below 4,000 metres and would be drilled to almost 5,000 metres, he said.

If commercially viable, the field's initial production rate would depend on the system selected, he said. Mobil is considering tanker-loading facilities at the wellsite and a system involving pipelines to shore.

But much study is needed to develop a safe system because the Grand Banks is subject to ice floes from the Labrador current.

Mobil is also intent on following up its natural gas discoveries off Sable Island on the Scotian Shelf, he said.

This work has been delayed by a shortage of drilling vessels, he said.

B of M president urges boost in oil price levels

MONTREAL (CP) — Bank of Montreal president William Mulholland says Canada could follow an independent interest rate policy if it raised oil prices to near world levels and invested massively in domestic energy development.

"As things stand now, Canada has to keep its interest rates more or less on a level with American interest rates or suffer the consequences of funds leaving the country to seek higher returns," Mulholland said in a speech to the Canadian Club of Montreal.

"But if we get something constructive under way, something like the significant creation of new energy and new wealth, our dependence decreases.

"The prospect of real growth, of high returns on investment, would keep investors . . . interested in placing money in Canada, and we would set interest rates at levels that reflect Canadian conditions rather than American conditions."

But to achieve this Canada would have to raise its oil prices substantially both to cut consumption of expensive imported crude and to give oil companies a higher rate of return.

Another requirement would be effective co-ordination of public and private demands on the capital markets, he said.

Mulholland said major banks are having trouble recycling all the money deposited by oil-exporting countries, and he urged the International Monetary Fund to borrow directly from these countries or in the international money markets to supplement member country subscriptions.

The IMF could then channel money to Third World countries in long-term loans the commercial banks are reluctant to make, and it could also use the money to create a new international reserve instrument.

The Bank of Montreal chief estimated that net external assets of members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries totalled about $220 billion at the end of 1979, and forecasts indicate the 1980 OPEC surplus could go as high as $120 billion.

Sunday's scorcher fell short of record

If you thought Sunday was warm, you were right.

The weather office says the 20 degree temperature at the Pat Bay airport was only one degree shy of the record high for that date of 21 degrees back in 1944.

Forecast for the next few days is for unsettled weather with mixed sun, cloud and showers.

Meanwhile, some Victorians who were unable to sleep saw a spectacular lightning storm which bristled and boomed over Western Washington early today.

The storm was caused by a tropic air mass which moved north from Oregon.

Afghans 'sent to Siberia'

Times News Services

ISLAMABAD — More than 13,000 Moslem insurgents have been sent to Siberia in the Soviet Union for opposing the regime of Afghan President Babrak Karmal, Pakistani politician Mufi Mehmud said Sunday.

Addressing a convention of the five-party Pakistan National Alliance, PNA chief Mehmud said his information was based on authentic reports from Afghanistan.

He said the Soviet Union committed "grave atrocities" in Afghanistan and a large number of Afghan villages had been bombed and then bulldozed.

So far about 100,000 people have died in Afghanistan and a similar number have been jailed, he said.

Mehmud said Soviet troops had destroyed crops by spraying poisonous chemicals on fields in an apparent attempt to starve the population.

Striking nurses end walkout

EDMONTON (CP) — Most of Alberta's 6,600 striking nurses began to return to work today after a tentative settlement was reached Sunday night, a union spokesman said.

Simon Renouf, chief executive officer of the United Nurses of Alberta, said 21 nurses remained on strike at Canmore, where the hospital administration is not represented by the Alberta Hospital Association.

Under the proposed agreement, wages would increase in stages — the first one retroactive to Jan. 1, 1980 — moving to a range of $10.09 to $11.79 per hour by March 1, 1981, he said.

Balcony fall baffles police

A police spokesman said Toby Griffin, 21, of apartment 312, 3255 Cook Street, apparently tried to climb from her balcony to the one below.

When she was unable to secure a foothold, she tried to climb back up.

Griffin fell, hitting the second-floor balcony before plunging to the ground.

She is listed in fair condition today following surgery.

What was the worst marine disaster involving Victorians?

It was undoubtedly the wreck of the Pacific which sank off Cape Flattery on Nov.4, 1875. In the disaster, more than 250 passengers and crew, mostly Victorians, lost their lives.

The Pacific, a U.S.-owned vessel, commanded by Capt. J.D. Howell, docked in Victoria to take on passengers bound for San Francisco. The exact number aboard will never be known. Her decks were packed with people, especially miners from the Cassiar gold rush.

The Pacific collided with the Orpheus, a sailing vessel bound from San Francisco to Nanaimo for coal, about 10 p.m. and only two persons aboard the Pacific survived.

What shocked Victorians were claims that the Orpheus didn't stop to save those on the steamer. Her master later said he was unaware the Pacific was sinking.

However, members of his crew testified at an inquiry that the cries of the drowning people could plainly be heard by all aboard and the captain refused to turn back.

It was later determined the Pacific should never have been allowed at sea. She was an old hulk and had been officially retired from active service in 1872.

But U.S. marine regulations lagged behind other advanced nations in the 19th century and the owners brought her out to cash in on the gold rush.

Old Fort Rodd: a task for a sleuth

From lanterns to roofing, any material used in the restoration must be authentic — and it's sometimes hard to find out just what was in common use a hundred years ago

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Ron Lovatt thinks his job is a little like a sleuth's.

"It's an enormous detective game. I begin with a clue of some kind and follow it until I either come up with the answer or at least some other clue I can start all over with," says Lovatt.

As the historian helping to recreate Fort Rodd Hill military base, Lovatt investigates the smallest details of history.

Fort Rodd is a national historic park that's in the process of being restored to show different periods of its history as an important military bulwark on the Pacific Ocean. It's the only national historic military park west of Ontario.

Although federal government budget cuts have slowed work on the park, superintendent Ian MacLean says he hopes Fisgard Lighthouse will open by October and that by the summer of 1981, the Upper Battery will be completely restored.

For two years, Lovatt, whose background is military history, has been investigating just about every aspect of life at the military base which was first used in 1877.

The historian uses a variety of methods to get information about the past, including official records, old photographs, artifacts found at the site and talking to people who are personally familiar with the history.

Lovatt has used all of these techniques but he doesn't overlook luck either.

Lovatt watched the proceedings but could hardly contain his excitment because although the main subject of the photo was of little interest to him, in the background the Fort's original gate was visible.

It was the only record he had of it.

People's recollections can be very helpful, particularly in restoring a site such as Fort Rodd which has a comparatively short history, but memories are often faulty and must be regarded with caution, he said.

His job is to supply two general types of information: An overview of the military outpost and detailed information about particular items or practices.

Examples of other research subjects include the types of lanterns, barbed wire and guns used at the Fort.

Lovatt explained that the park just doesn't settle for any style of object that seems vaguely correct.

For example he spent several months tracking down the exact kind of lantern that would have been used at the Fort.

He knew of two museums in Great Britain that contain a variety of military artifacts.

When he contacted them, he learned that one particular style of lantern had been issued to all British garrisons of the day.

Armed with that information and confirmation from several people who could remember the old Fort, he's confident he's found the authentic lantern.

Fort Rodd as a national historic park is governed by a policy that says any replacement of material must be authentic.

Consequently when new roofing materials are applied to a battery roof, for example, the tar and gravel material must be as close to the original material as possible.

Concrete from old stairways is analysed and when a new stairway is built the same mix of concrete is used.

At the time the Fort was built, lumber was the same dimension as its name.

A two-by-four was exactly that and not pared down size, as it is today.

So when reconstruction involving lumber is done arrangements have to made with a saw mill to provide the specially-cut items.

Maintenance supervisor Earl Pallister says its becoming more difficult and much more expensive to get that kind of custom service.

"That's what makes the cost of restoring this site so high," said Pallister.

"I really question a lot of the so-called restoration work that's being done around the country when people say they've restored something but really they've only half-copied the original.

"We don't try to phoney anything up — if we can't replace it with an authentic object we let people know," he said.

One of the harder tasks was locating a sufficiently skilled wood carver to replace the ornately scrolled wooden mantlepiece in the warrant officers quarters — and there was only a short section of the original to guide him.

Empress hosts Royal lunch

A civic luncheon Friday for the Princess was almost postponed because of problems with kitchen facilities at the Empress.

But the luncheon will proceed as originally planned, a Capital Region District health department spokesman said today.

A number of health violations in the kitchen have been corrected and the regional health office is satisfied the Empress meets provincial health standards, the spokesman said.

The lunch was almost cancelled several weeks ago when federal health inspectors checking out the kitchen found a number of equipment problems that meant the hotel was not living up to standards provided in the provincial health act.

The venerable old hotel is operating its kitchen under a temporary 90-day licence which expires next month.

But according CRD health officer Don Wakelin it is standard practice to issue interim licences to restaurants undergoing equipment improvements or renovations, as long as the infractions are of a minor nature.

Itinerary set for princess

Princess Alexandra arrives in Victoria on Tuesday for a five-day visit to Vancouver Island.

She is scheduled to fly into Pat Bay airport at 7:20 p.m. and then retire to Government House.

The princess is colonel-in-chief of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) and the regiment has planned a number of events during her visit.

On Wednesday evening, she will attend an official reception and dinner given by Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving for the officers of the Canadian Scottish.

The next morning she will visit the Legislative Buildings and then at 10:15 a.m. leave for Nanaimo.

While there, she will inspect the regimental cadet corps and attend a civic luncheon, returning in the afternoon via the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway. Thursday night, there will be a Government House reception given by Premier Bennett.

A visit to Victoria city hall is planned for 12:45 p.m. Friday. Princess Alexandra is scheduled to sign the guest book and then attend a civic luncheon at The Empress.

That afternoon she will tour the Provincial Museum's native Indian and natural history galleries.

At 3:40 p.m. Friday, the Princess is due to arrive at the Bay Street armory for a royal salute by the Canadian Scottish pipes and drums. The princess will inspect the quarter guard, view displays, attend a reception in the messes and unveil a plaque officially declaring the regimental museum open. That night she will attend a dinner at the Union Club.

The Canadian Scottish Regiment will exercise the freedom of the city at 10:30 a.m. Saturday on Government Street in front of The Empress, parading to the lawns in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Princess Alexandra is to arrive about 11 a.m. to inspect the regiment and then attend a regimental lunch at Work Point barracks.

She will leave Victoria Sunday, May 4, on a flight to London, England.

Police keep beaches quiet

A police crackdown on wild beach parties in Saanich produced a much quieter weekend for residents and a bonanza of seized liquor and beer.

Sgt. Bob Wray, in charge of the beach patrol Saturday night, reported seizures of 148 bottles of beer and 41 ounces of liquor.

Four minors were charged with possession of alcohol.

Friday night police confiscated 355 bottles of beer, 104 ounces of liquor and 182 ounces of wine and laid 14 charges.

Wray said 22 complaints were investigated Saturday, including five noisy beach parties and a trespassing incident.

Plainclothes officers in Saanich liquor stores prevented many under-age youths from buying liquor and vehicles approaching beach areas were checked for liquor, resulting in most of the seizures.

Injunction on shopping centre 'just a temporary inconvenience'

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

A B.C. Supreme Court injunction preventing Saanich from doubling the size of Tillicum shopping centre is nothing more than a temporary inconvenience, according to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier.

Couvelier said today the ruling by Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie preventing Saanich from lifting a restrictive covenant is invalid.

Lawyers for Saanich and developers Cal Investments Ltd. will eventually straighten out the problem, he said.

"We'll just have to see how things develop," he said.

During a special meeting Thursday, Saanich council voted 5-4 to lift a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 295,000 square feet.

Friday morning the Capital Region District asked for an injunction.

The covenant had been officially removed by the time the injunction was processed and served to the municipality Friday afternoon, according to Couvelier.

All the injunction has done is cause the court registrar to delay removing the covenant from the official deed, he explained.

And the mayor admitted the injuction does prevent the municipality from issuing any building permits to Cal Investments.

But he said Saanich has many legal opportunities to win the battle against the CRD.

"There are many options available to bring this thing to a head."

The ex-parte application, meaning one party applies without the other party being present, goes into effect immediately.

Saanich must give the regional board two days notice before appealing the injunction.

Couvelier said the fight boils down to a battle over which Greater Victoria shopping mall will get Eatons.

It is in the regional board's and Victoria's best interests to create delaying tactics and drag the issue out as long as possible, the mayor charged.

Asked whether long delays will cause Eatons to withdraw from Tillicum shopping centre and locate in another mall, Couvelier declined comment.

The developers Thursday offered Saanich an extra $375,000 for road widening in addition to a $300,000 offer for road improvements made last Monday.

The 200,000 square foot Eatons expansion — if it goes ahead — will make the $30 million complex the largest shopping centre in the Greater Victoria area.

A restrictive covenant was put in place last summer as part of an agreement between the CRD and Saanich.

Parents' pressure closes school street

City hall has gone along with a request from the parents' auxiliary at Quadra school and agreed to close Fifth Street behind the school for a trial period until the end of the school term.

The street separates the school from the playground, and is sometimes unsafe, especially when parents drop off and pick up their children.

City engineer John Sansom and the traffic advisory subcommittee have recommended to council that the street be closed for the distance separating the school and playground.

Meanwhile, council has received a request to declare 309 Simcoe Street a heritage house.

The 90-year-old house near the corner of Oswego and Simcoe, built in 1891 for wholesale merchant Harold Ault, is described as a landmark building in the James Bay neighborhood.

The heritage advisory committee recommended designation, which would prevent demolition or major alterations to the exterior. The owner would also have his municipal property taxes rebated if he spends the money on exterior restoration work.

Council's land use planning committee votes on the proposal Tuesday.

Scenic trails mapped in Highlands

The Highland District Community Association has prepared a detailed plan for a trail system which could be established in the area to provide maximum recreation potential.

The plan — prepared last summer by two students hired by the association with funding from the Provincial Youth Employment program — recommends four main trails following two ridges of land and two watercourses be created.

The four trails would link scenic walks with points of interest and would themselves be interconnected by a system of minor trails.

The study also touched on the possibility of creating areas for horse and motorcycle trails.

Possible parking and transit terminal sites were identified in the study.

The four main trails proposed for the area are:

—Craigflower trail which follows Craigflower Creek.

The study also presents considerable information about how a trail system could be created without any outright purchase of most of the land.

Bob McMinn, chairman of the association's planning committee, said preserving at least some recreation potential in the Highlands is an opportunity that will be lost completely if action isn't taken very soon.

The association would like to use provisions set out in the municipal and highways acts that allow trails to be dedicated in the same way roads are commonly dedicated.

Under those provisions people applying to subdivide their land might be required to dedicate no more than five per cent of their land for public use which, according to the acts, could include trails.

But CRD planner Yoon Chee, who's working on the secondary plan, has some doubts about whether the provincial government is prepared to implement its legislation to that extent.

Chee also mentioned that consideration would have to be given to the increasing risk of fires if trails are built through out the area.

"It's got a lot of favorable ideas that should be looked into. It's a long term plan that would require co-operation from the provincial government."

McMinn feels strongly that if there's agreement in principle that some long term recreation use be made of the Highlands it's vital a plan for a trail system be formally recognized as soon as possible before too much land is subdivided and the opportunity to have trails dedicated is lost.

Cougars skinned by upstart Hunter

REGINA — The 1979-80 hockey season officially ended Sunday for Victoria Cougars but Regina Pats will be active for at least two more weeks because Bart Hunter begged to differ with past records and virtually every scouting report.

Hunter's brilliance proved to be the biggest difference as the Pats swept the Cougars aside in five games to capture the Western League championship. Surprising the well-regarded Cougars by winning two of three games in Victoria last week, the Bryan Murray-coached Pats put the lid on their trip to the Memorial Cup final by defeating the Western Division champions 7-1 Saturday and 5-4, in overtime, Sunday.

There were key turnabouts here and there but, in the final analysis, it was Hunter who provided Regina with the big difference in the series.

He wasn't supposed to.

Signed as an overage player to tend goal for Regina, Hunter ranked only as No. 6 among regular netminders in the 12-team league during the regular season. His average was 4.06. And, as the playoffs moved along, it was almost impossible to find a pro scout who didn't concede Victoria the edge in netminding.

Kevin Eastman and Grant Fuhr, finishing 1-2 with their respective averages of 3.10 and 3.14, were to give Victoria a big advantage on the final line of defence.

It didn't happen.

Fuhr, the league's rookie-of-the-year, wasn't even around when the season ended Sunday. The 17-year-old suffered a painful dislocated shoulder while reaching for a shot early in the third period Saturday night. Tagged for six goals, he yielded to Eastman.

Eastman mopped up Saturday and started Sunday, with forward Dan Deschenes dressing as the backup goaltender. While tagged for what appeared to be a pair of soft goals, Eastman turned in an otherwise strong performance before unheralded Brent Pascal wound up the series with his goal at 9:41 in the sudden-death overtime.

Trouble was, while Eastman did come up with some big stops, his teammates couldn't get anything past Hunter, when it counted.

In all five games in the championship round, Victoria out-shot Regina, including a 38-37 edge in Saturday's one-sided loss.

"Goaltending made the difference," said Murray. "Hunter was better in four of the five games (the exception being Victoria's 7-2 victory last Wednesday). I was surprised at Victoria's goaltending."

Murray also felt Regina won the series "in Victoria" by winning two of the three games there.

Victoria coach Jack Shupe pinned his team's downfall on the inability of his players to "finish off the big plays. We didn't get the big goals when we needed them."

He pointed to the fruitless, final 20-minute stretch Sunday. Provided a 2-0 lead in the first on a pair of goals by Greg Adams, the Cougars fell behind 4-2 early in the third before Bob Smith and Grant Rezansoff brought them from behind and forced overtime.

Seconds after Rezansoff's goal, rookie Paul Cyr fired a shot that Hunter stopped. It was, perhaps, his greatest save of the night. Cougars pressed for the balance of the third period, had other chances to go ahead. In overtime, Adams, Bob Jansch, Brad Palmer and Barry Pederson all missed great chances to put it away for the Cougars.

Adams, who scored 62 goals for the Cougars during the regular campaign, flubbed perhaps the best opportunity. With Hunter down, Adams' shot from the slot missed the open net.

That set the stage for Pascal, who managed only two goals and four assists in 16 previous playoff games, to emerge as Sunday's unlikely hero.

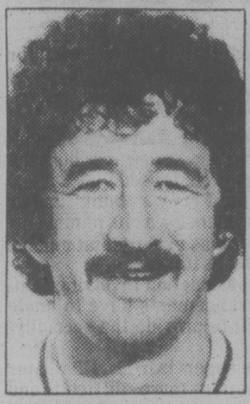
MacAdam says adieu with a goal and words



AL MacADAM

MONTREAL (CP) — Al MacAdam put Toronto Maple Leafs out of the playoff picture with an overtime goal in preliminary-round action, and it was his goal at 18:34 of the third period Sunday that dashed Montreal Canadiens' hopes of a fifth consecutive Stanley Cup title.

"They are gone," MacAdam said of the Canadiens, stressing every word, after a 3-2 victory over the defending Stanley Cup champions. Minnesota won the best-of-seven National Hockey League series quarter-final 4-3.

"Now we're the best until someone proves otherwise," said MacAdam.

North Stars open a best-of-seven semi-final series against the Flyers at Philadelphia on Tuesday. Buffalo Sabres play host to New York Islanders in the other semi-final start Tuesday.

This marks the first season that four post-1967 teams have constituted the pool for the semi-finals.

Canadiens played the seventh game without injured right winger Guy Lafleur and centre Pierre Larouche, while the North Stars put their faith in netminder Gilles Meloche and brash youngsters short on playoff experience.

"A lot of people have said that we're young and that we don't have much playoff experience," said coach Glen Sonmor. "What we do have is a remarkable amalgamation of extremely intelligent and competent kids who expect to do nothing else than succeed."

Tom Younghans and Craig Hartsburg also scored for Minnesota, with Mark Napier and Rod Langway scoring for the Canadiens.

Early in the game, Minnesota hardly looked like a team determined to oust the champions. Urged on by the cheers of 17,465 fans, Montreal took a 1-0 lead on Mark Napier's goal at 9:12 of the first period.

Then, from 15 feet to the right of Montreal's net, goalie Denis Herron attempted a pass that hit the side of the goal and rebounded to an onrushing Tom Younghans, who scored into the vacant net.

"I was just thinking about getting the puck behind the net and around on the boards," Herron said. "It was a very embarrassing, stupid mistake that happened in a game that was far too important for it to happen.

"In my career I've probably made that around-the-net pass 1,000 times, but tonight it just didn't work. The puck was on end and spinning when I tried the pass and it just went off my stick the wrong way. I actually thought it was going in the net when I first released it."

Napier, who had several excellent scoring chances, almost put Montreal ahead early in the second period but, like many others, was thwarted by Meloche.

"I don't care what anyone says, Meloche was the difference in the series and is the backbone of that team," said Langway, whose goal at 5:23 of the third period tied it 2-2 after Hartsburg gave Minnesota a 2-1 lead at 16:46 of the second period.

"It was a hell of a game and a hell of a series," Langway said, "but I don't think it's the first time that the better team has lost. I still think we're the better team."

After Langway's goal, Pierre Mondou had an excellent opportunity to put Montreal ahead while Minnesota's Paul Shmyr was off for tripping Steve Shutt, but Meloche slid to the side of the crease to make a chest save.

A labor dispute involving CBC production employees failed to disrupt television coverage of the game although some features, including studio interviews, had to be dropped.

The Montreal television audience saw the game without commercials, while CBC oulets in the rest of the country were able to insert their own advertising into the telecast.

The 900 production workers, locked out Friday, had promised not to picket the Forum.

Sonics blow big lead '76ers oust Celtics

Times News Services

Los Angeles Lakers, with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scoring 25 points and Jamaal Wilkes adding 24, overcame a 21-point deficit midway through the third quarter at Seattle, Sunday, to defeat Seattle SuperSonics 98-93.

The victory gave the Lakers a 3-1 lead in the National Basketball Association Western Conference best-of-seven final.

The Lakers can dethrone last season's NBA champions with a victory at Los Angeles Wednesday night.

The winner of the Los Angeles-Seattle series will meet Philadelphia '76ers, who took the Eastern Conference final series by wiping out Boston Celtics, 4-1.

Wilkes collected 12 of his points in the final quarter as Los Angeles completed its second-half comeback.

The Sonics held a 69-48 lead with 6:39 left in the third quarter and appeared ready to even the series at two games apiece. But from that point, the Sonics couldn't do much right while the Lakers couldn't do much wrong.

The Lakers scored 13 straight points to cut the Seattle lead to eight points at 69-61 and outscored Seattle 24-2 for a 72-71 lead with 46 seconds remaining in the third quarter.

Gus Williams led the Seattle attack with 25 points while Dennis Johnson added 18 for the Sonics, who now have lost three straight games to the Lakers.

The '76ers beat the Celtics 105-94 in Boston.

Boston had entered the playoffs with the best record in the NBA, 61-21, while Philadelphia finished the regular season two games behind the Celtics in the Atlantic Divison.

"Man for man, we have a better team," said Darryl Dawkins, who had 18 points. "We just didn't play up to par when we came here during the regular season."

The '76ers made up for it in the playoff as Boston lost three straight games for the first time all season.

A match-up between Julius Erving and Larry Bird fizzled. Erving scored 14 points, while Bird hit for 12 as he made only five of 19 field goal attempts.

"I think Larry was tired," said Bobby Jones, who guarded Bird. "I don't thing it was my defence."

Jays take rookie pilot off hook and into lead

By The Canadian Press

Rookies make mistakes, even rookie managers like 64-year-old Bobby Mattick.

Mattick, Toronto Blue Jays manager, submitted the wrong lineup card before Sunday's game in Milwaukee but that's about the only mistake he made all weekend as the high-flying Blue Jays completed a three-game sweep of the hard-hitting Brewers, 8-2.

"That's the dunce hat," Mattick said after the game, wearing a maroon cap with pink tails in the shape of horns on the sides. "I won it hands down today.

"I had two different lineups and took the wrong one up. What a stupid mistake."

The surprising Blue Jays are the only team in the American League East Division playing better than .500. Sunday's victory gave them an 8-6 record — 5-0 against Milwaukee — and they are in first place, one game ahead of New York Yankees.

Even early in the season that's a rather elevated atmosphere for a club that lost 107, 102 and 109 games in its first three seasons of last-place existence and never finished closer to the top than 45½ games.

Elsewhere, Minnesota Twins buried Oakland A's 20-11, New York Yankees edged Chicago White Sox 1-0, Kansas City Royals nipped Baltimore Orioles 3-2, Seattle Mariners defeated California Angels 7-3, Detroit Tigers downed Boston Red Sox 8-5 and Cleveland Indians beat Texas Rangers 7-4.

On Saturday, Toronto shut out Milwaukee 4-0.

Woods singled with two out in the Toronto first and Roy Howell walked. But the lineup Mattick gave the umpires had Otto Velez batting fourth so when Velez stepped to the plate the Brewers made an appeal and Velez was called out.

The Blue Jays took Mattick off the hook by scoring five times in the sixth, two on a double by Willie Upshaw and two on a home run by Barry Bonnell. Velez drove in the fifth run with a single and Woods delivered a two-run single in the seventh.

"This was a big game, giving us a sweep over a team like that," Mattick said after the Blue Jays completed a 5-3 road trip, best in their brief history. "I think we're a lot more improved than people thought we were and this will give us some confidence after last year.

"A good start means something."

Dan Meyer drove in three runs for the Mariners, two with his first home run of the season, to back Glenn Abbott's eight-hit pitching.

In the National League the Los Angeles Dodgers won their eighth straight game, a 3-1 decision over San Diego Padres as two Dodger outfielders make sparkling catches.

"That was as great an exhibition of defence as you'll see," said Dodgers right-hander Don Sutton after watching his fielders take away two seemingly sure-fire hits from Padres' Gene Tenace.

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Blizzard and Edmonton Drillers won North American Soccer League games at home Sunday, while Canada's other entry, Vancouver Whitecaps, lost on the road Saturday.

There were 18,193 fans in Toronto as the Blizard defeated Washington Diplomats 1-0, and 14,783 in Edmonton when Drillers clipped San Jose Earthquakes 4-2.

A goal by Ivan Lukacevic in the 31st minute and shutout goaltending by Tony Chursky lifted the Blizzard to its second win in four games.

Chursky had an easy time of it in the Toronto goal, facing only 14 shots from the Diplomats.

Head coach Keith Eddy said Toronto is playing with much greater confidence lately, and he was particularly pleased with the defensive job Mike McLenaghen did on Washington star Johan Cruyff.

Drillers' first goal came when striker Jan Goossens' cross from left wing was inadvertently headed home by San Jose defender Niki Nikolic. Striker Edi Kirschner fired Edmonton's other goal while midfielder Andries Maseko scored both for San Jose, set up each time by George Best, the Irish international who was playing his first game with Earthquakes.

On Saturday, Luis Fernando, the most valuable player in Brazil last year, scored both goals for Los Angeles Aztecs in a 2-1 win over defending league champion Vancouver Whitecaps. Vancouver's only goal came with 4:05 remaining when Trevor Whymark scored after taking a pass from Carl Valentine.

In other games Saturday, Tulsa Roughnecks edged New York Cosmos 2-1, Dallas Tornado blanked Philadelphia Fury 2-0, Memphis Rogues shaded Atlanta Chiefs 4-3, Tampa Bay Rowdies shut out Rochester Lancers 2-0, Portland Timbers trimmed Detroit Express 2-1, Fort Lauderdale Strikers squeaked past San Diego Sockers 1-0 and Seattle Sounders beat California Surf 3-2.

Levey takes Ontario title

Top-seeded Andrie Levey of Victoria defeated second-ranked Nancy Cranbury of Toronto 9-2, 5-9, 9-2, 9-1 Sunday to win the girls' under-19 title at the Ontario junior squash championships in Toronto. Andrie, who will also be top seed in the Canadian junior championships in Ottawa next weekend, cruised by Patti Hogan of Toronto in her semi-final.

Victoria boys didn't fare as well although two reached the semi-finals in tough fields. Bob Ballinger was ousted in the semis by top-seeded Ward Meek of Toronto, who went on to win the under-16 event, and in the under-14 competition, John Dickie of Victoria was defeated by top-ranked Gary Waite of Toronto, who took the title.

Seasprays extended an unbeaten record to 18-0 by defeating Seattle Lacrosse Club 18-3 in the final of the 16-team tournament.

The Victoria club gained the final with a 17-7 win over Oak Parlor of Seattle in the semi-finals while Seattle Lacrosse Club advanced by beating Oregon State University 15-5.

Esquimalt's next preseason exhibition is Tuesday against South Vancouver Island Senior "B" League All-Stars at 8 in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

'Slow' feet, old friend lead to rolloff crowns

By DOUG PEDEN

Emmy Plesch kept thinking about her feet and Fred Lobbezoo called on an old friend Sunday at Mayfair Lanes.

The systems were different but the results were the same — victories in tenpin competition of the 17th annual Victoria Times Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

"Slowing down her feet" helped Emmy rattle the pins for a sizzling 235 count in her second game and finish with 217 for an impressive three-game series of 634 that gave her a second women's rolloff crown in three years.

In third place after two games in the men's rolloff, Fred decided to finish with a ball that had been a good friend during the regular season, but which had been discarded for the first two games Sunday in favor of a harder ball because of anticipated lane conditions.

The old friend was still a true-blue pal. Lobbezoo blazed down the homestretch, winding up with six successive strikes and a 242 count that gave him a 618 series and his first rolloff title with a 26-pin margin over Frank Miller, the early leader.

Miller appeared a likely winner after opening with 225, but he slipped to 168 in the second game as Rick Blake moved in front on tallies of 188 and 210. Frank charged back into contention, starting the final game with a four-timer, and then watched his victory hopes slide into the gutter when he left the eighth and 10th frames open, winding up with 199.

Ken Grexton, frustrated by a second-game 148, was a red-hot finisher, hitting for a four-timer and a three-timer on the way to 244 that lifted him into third place at 582.

Even that 244 wasn't enough to stop the ladies from collecting the day's main scoring honors. In addition to Plesch's high-three total, the women's division produced the top single game when Bertha Saxby staged a spectacular finish with a 245 that boosted her into second place at 607, a total that would have been enough to win the women's crown in most other years.

Shooting for a third rolloff title and her second in succession, Maureen King was the first-game leader and 16 pins off the pace after two games before winding up third at 565.

With their rolloff triumphs, Fred and Emmy each received a Times Trophy and, as daily subscribers to the Victoria Times, each also received a bonus award of $150.

The same prizes will be available at Town and Country Lanes next Sunday when fivepinners take their turn on the Bowler-of-the-Year rolloff stage. As was the case with the tenpinners at Mayfair, bowling fees for rolloff contestants will be shared by the lanes and the Times.

"I was very pleased with myself today," Plesch said after receiving her Times Trophy. "I was able to concentrate.

"If I don't concentrate on keeping my feet slow, I run up to the line like a steam engine."

Emmy was certainly concentrating in the second game when she rolled three straight strikes, was jolted by a split in the sixth frame and then bounced back with a four-timer for her 235. She was also talking to her feet in the final game when she avoided open frames and tossed in a four-timer to protect her lead.

Also the rolloff queen in 1978 and a perennial qualifier, Emmy posted averages of 176 and 177 in her two leagues this season and captured the Victoria Women's 400 Club rolloff title.

Lobbezoo racked up averages of 190 and 191 in league play and won the scratch all-events and shared the scratch doubles crown in the city tournament during the season.

Close to the top in several previous rolloffs, he has reduced the amount of hook in his delivery in recent months to obtain "better consistency and more control."

Most of his high scores in that time were with the softer ball that was abandoned for Sunday's first two games and the one that will most likely be in his hand when another bowling season rolls around.

Experience fails to help ex-champ

By ERNIE FEDORUK

There's a difference between "experience" and "playing a lot," and Bill Wakeham figures the discrepency was one of the intangible reasons the four-time champion is on the sidelines after two rounds of the 1980 Vancouver Island Open match-play golf tournament.

Sandy Harper, a cool 23-year-old from Nanaimo, was the tangible reason. A former B.C. junior champion, Harper put an end to Wakeham's hopes of a fifth title triumph by defeating the Cowichan professional 4 and 3 in their second-round meeting Sunday at Uplands.

Well-stocked with tournament experience, Wakeham felt some of his unfavorable shots "were the kind that come from not playing a lot." As a result, Wakeham, rebounding from a mid-winter back operation, wound up with an approximate medal of 74, four over par, while Harper scored an approximate 71.

"If you hope to beat a guy like Sandy, you have to fire your best shots," said Wakeham. "He's very calm, has got experience and is going to be tough for anybody to beat."

Harper advanced to next Sunday's quarter-finals at Victoria Club along with medallist and defending champion Dave Mick; Jamie Harper, Sandy's 16-year-old brother; professionals Ed Beauchemin and Bob Hogarth; Dave Donaldson, Stu Holroyd and John Gee, a trio of Gorge Vale amateurs.

Mick, who was five under par in his first two rounds, survived a "not too swift" eight-over performance and managed to edge 19-year-old Brian DeGirolamo one up.

Three up after five holes, Mick had a struggle with the smooth-swinging youngster from Gorge Vale. DeGirolamo came back to lead after 12 holes and missed an extra-hole march when the defending champ sank a pressure-packed seven-foot for a half on the 18th that sealed the result.

With the fall of Wakeham, Oak Bay assistant Doug Mahovlic and Gorge Vale assistant Mike Cook, Beauchemin and Hogarth remain the surviving pros.

Beauchemin, 25, played one-over golf to bounce Jeff Jones 5 and 4 while Hogarth stopped Randy Gallop, a 20-year-old from Nanaimo, 2 and 1.

Moving into the eights of the handicap division were Wayne Douglas and Ian Fraser, both of Colwood; Bob Matlock of Nanaimo; Ken Morgan of Cedar Hill, and four Gorge members — Al Stewart, Glen Barris, Rick Casson and Eric Barry.

Fourth win for Watson

Times News Services

Tom Watson rallied from the potential disaster of a double bogey and, with a 73, scored his fourth golf victory of the season Sunday in the Greater New Orleans Open.

A leader all the way, Watson scored his second consecutive wire-to-wire triumph with a 273 total, 15 shots under par on the 7,080-yard Lakewood course and two in front of Lee Trevino, who closed with a 69 for 275.

Watson also led all the way in winning last week's Tournament of Champions.

His latest victory added to the overwhelming statistics compiled by Watson. It was the 20th of his career on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, placing him in a tie for 15th on the all-time winning list.

He collected $45,000 and pushed his leading money-winning total to $246,525 with the season not half gone. That's almost double the amount won by the No. 2 man.

Since no one else has won more than two titles this year, the victory put Watson far in front in the race for Player-of-the-Year honors.

And the winning total reduced his leading stroke average to 69.9, well ahead of any challengers in the fight for the Vardon Trophy. No one has ever won the Vardon Trophy or Player of the Year or led in money-winnings for four consecutive years. He put himself in a position to sweep all three for a fourth consecutive season.

At Austin, Tex., Tommy Bolt and Art Wall, losers in a six-hole playoff last year, charged from three shots behind to edge Sam Snead and Don January by two strokes to win the third annual Legends of Golf.

Bolt, 61, and Wall, 56, split a first-place prize of $70,000 with their final-round six-under-par 64, for a 54-hole total of 187 — a record 23 under par. The old record over the 6,584-yard Onion Creek course, which plays to a par-70, was 17 under par by Snead and Gardner Dickinson in 1978.

Snead, 67, and January, 50, playing in his first Legends, bogied two holes during the day after two straight rounds of 60 and struggled to a best-ball, one-under 69 for a 189 total. Each won $25,000.

The tournament was a best-ball affair, counting the low score shot by either partner on each hole.

Third-year pro Barbara Barrow, 25, fired a five-under-par 67 for a one-stroke victory over Beth Daniel in the $100,000 Birmingham Classic. Her first win on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour came under rainy playing conditions, but her final-day 67 was the best round of the tournament. Barrow had rounds of 71-72-67 for a 210, six under par.

Barrow started the day four strokes off the pace behind second-round leader Pat Bradley, who slipped to a 75 and finished in a tie for seventh with Sandra Palmer and JoAnne Carner at 214.

Cup-winning A's, Wests set for Province Cup play

Showing strength at all positions, Athletics defeated second division Nanaimo City 4-1 Saturday at Royal Athletic Park to wind up Vancouver Island League competition. But there's still some work ahead for Athletics as well as arch-rival Victoria West.

A's and the first division-champion Wests open Province Cup action next weekend. Both have been seeded into the quarter-finals. Athletics will open against a Vancouver-area team Saturday at Royal Athletic Park while the Wests will play Kelowna on Sunday.

The provincial champions will represent B.C. in the Dominion Challenge Cup final.

The leadership of playing-coach Brian Robinson, the firepower of a persistent forward line headed by veteran John Leier and youthful Dave McCaig, and the steadiness of goaltender Grant Darley carried A's to victory.

But it wasn't easy. Nanaimo proved to be a stubborn side until goals by McCaig and Keith Bridge, two minutes apart and with less nine minutes remaining, settled matters.

The goal was McCaig's second. He scored what proved to be the game-winner at the 27-minute mark. Dean Stokes counted Athletics' first goal while Leier figured in three of the four Victoria scoring plays.

Lansdowne Flyers, who were unbeaten in the regular season and completed a successful tour of Great Britain last month, captured the Vancouver Island junior high school rugby title Saturday by tripping Quamichan of Duncan 28-4 at Centennial Stadium.

The first division champions of the Vancouver Island Rugby Union demolished touring Nippon Steel of Japan 70-12 in an international exhibition match at Macdonald Park.

The other two JBAA teams claimed British Columbia semi-final victories. James Bay seconds defeated Pocomos of Fraser Valley 23-15 and the James Bay thirds nipped Surrey Beavers, 16-12.

Paul Molholm scored three tries and Kim Clark added two tries and two converts to spark the James Bay firsts. Paul Vaeson, Dan Hemmingway and Gary Johnston added two tries each, Paul Coupeland scored a try and kicked a convert while single tries were contributed by Al Foster and Mike DeGoede. Murray Allen kicked four converts.

Barry Robbins led JBAA seconds by booting two penalty goals and two converts while Drew Denniston scored two tries and Brad Miles added one.

The JBAA thirds were led by Ken Wilke's two tries and Harold Butler's two penalty goals and convert.

Tom Johnson leads leaders

Victoria bounced Gordon Head 22-6 and Juan de Fuca blanked Saanich 26-0 in Saanich Hornets Peewee Football League games Saturday at Glanford Park.

Tom Johnson scored two touchdowns for first-place Victoria on passes from quarterback Moki Barrett and Mike Hayes added the other major. Jeff Kirby scored the TD for Gordon Head.

Dean McMillan and Steve Davies each scored two touchdowns to lead the Juan de Fuca attack.

She's First Lady second and third

A determined effort to give help wherever she can be most useful... the firm conviction that in sharing with others she is enriching her own life... a strength of purpose in organizing and working for worthwhile projects in this city.

Her ability to minimize the fact that she has been in and out of hospital a number of times; that in 1974, because of circulatory troubles, she lost her left leg and now is waging a continuous fight to keep the right one.

And finally that she is the driving force behind the success of Victoria's Christmas Bureau.

Those are some of the reasons local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, through their City Council, chose Dorothy Parry as 1980 First Lady of the Year.

She will be presented with a special certificate of recognition at the sorority's Founder's Day banquet in the Commons Building, University of Victoria, Wednesday evening.

The first lady award, given annually since 1974, is specifically planned to focus attention on a woman who is making an outstanding contribution in the community.

Names and qualifications are submitted by the chapters to a nominating committee and the person is chosen, again through the chapters, by secret ballot.

Mrs. Parry's qualifications are outstanding.

She is an active worker in Salvation Army's Citadel League of Mercy with responsibility for planning visitations to Glengarry Hospital, and was chairman of the residential public appeal for the Red Shield drive from 1974 to 1978.

Because of a keen interest in missions, especially in Africa, she gives talks on that phase of Salvation Army work to church groups and other interested organizations.

She is also on call, whenever doctors request it, to visit and counsel amputees who are depressed through loss of a limb.

Last year she accepted further responsibility as president of the Ecumenical Women's Outreach for the 1979-80 term.

And right now she is helping in the office of Island Community Homemakers, a non-profit agency that took over when the Red Cross homemakers program was phased out.

As head of the Christmas Bureau Dorothy Parry correlates information and strives to eliminate duplication of service so available assistance reaches as many people as possible.

Each year a list of those in need of assistance is made up from information supplied by the ministry of human resources, church groups, individuals and service organizations.

Those names are then matched to donors and arrangements are made for them to get together.

All this volunteer work within the Victoria community becomes even more outstanding when it is realized Dorothy Parry has only been in this city since 1971.

This First Lady of the Year was born in Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe. As a young graduate nurse she worked in Johannesburg but returned to Rhodesia to marry David Parry, who had immigrated to that country from Wales.

Afer the birth of four sons and a daughter, the Parrys moved to Zambia and it was in that country that Mrs. Parry was active for 16 years in clinics organized through Salvation Army missions, to train native peoples how to "do it themselves."

When the Parrys came to Canada and to Victoria they were accompanied only by their youngest son and the daughter, both still of school age.

One of the older sons is back in Zimbabwe and the two others are in Johannesburg.

Whirlwind Dorothy finds rare moment to relax

The family home is on Dryfe Street in Oak Bay. There, according to Mrs. Parry, everyone helps, which makes it easy for her to keep up with all her volunteer work.

She's given it a name — Mabel. And she tells you, with quiet conviction — "Mabel and I are jolly able."

Postscript — Founder's Day this year will see the 15 chapters in Victoria joining with chapters in 31 countries around the world to mark a 49th birthday of the organization.

Started in Abilene, Kansas, in the depression of the early 1930s, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority was originally designed to provide an outlet for women who in those hard financial times, could not attend college and were obliged to remain home and support their families.

The founder, Walter Ross, provided those women with a program of cultural study so they could have a chance at intellectual and social growth.

Today, that first small social and cultural group has grown into an international sorority that devotes much time to service efforts as well.

Wednesday evening at the Founder's Day banquet in UVIC's Commons Building, Maureen Leach, president of Victoria City Council, will serve as chairman.

Carole Russell, a member of Xi Xi Chapter, will present a special message from the International Executive Council of the Sorority.

And as well as honoring the First Lady of the Year, awards will be presented to chapter members for their work in sorority and the community during the past year.

Heaven forbid the classified ad San Diego shortstop Ozzie Smith is running should be construed as a sarcastic poke at team owner Ray Kroc! Smith says his $72,000 salary is most generous. It just won't cover his $84,000 in debts. So he's advertising for a part-time job. He has one potential taker. Joan Kroc — wife of the McDonald's hamburger king — says she's willing to hire him as an assistant gardener. She says the job normally pays $3.50 an hour, but since "Ozzie is a college man and he has natural talent ... we could pay him $4.50." He also got a call from a lady in Bonita, Calif., who says she's just barely making it on Social Security and that he should be ashamed of himself.

Kroc

Josephine Schryburt of Ottawa is tiny, near-sighted and 90 years old. But she is not the pushover two young robbers probably thought she would be. "I was scared and didn't know what I was going to do," Mrs. Schryburt said, recalling how the two robbers pushed their way into the home where she lives alone. But when one of them pushed her into her living room, removed her glasses, leaving her almost blind, and pinned her arms, she fought back. "I tried to wrestle away from him so I could call for help. I scratched his arms as hard as I could but my nails aren't very sharp," she said. After a five-minute struggle, the robbers fled with a small amount of cash and a piece of jewelry of sentimental value. But Mrs.Schryburt — only four feet, eight inches tall — figures she left her mark on the forearms of one six-foot bandit.

The White House turkey edged ever closer to the center of power, pecking nonchalantly outside the Oval Office while debate continued over its origins and future. Jimmy Carter had already ordered that the 20-pound bird was not to be harmed, even though its sudden appearance on had hatched some embarrassing jokes about its presence. A report on the CBS Evening News that the turkey was planted by the company that sells a Kentucky bourbon was denied by Richard Newman, president of the distillers of Wild Turkey. Manus Fish, director of the National Park Service, was also questioned on the matter. Fish, whose office is responsible for the White House grounds, advised a course aimed at avoiding undue ruffling of feathers. "We are going to wait until it gets accustomed to its environment," he said, "and then perhaps we can coax it to leave."

abby

Dear Abby:

I'm an old codger of 80 years who has read your column ever since you started, and now I have a problem maybe you can help me with.

I've been married for over 55 years to a wonderful woman, but the last few years we have had one slight discord.

I have been sending away for some X-rated movies, which I enjoy watching privately at home a couple of times a month. Occasionally I get a new one so I can see some different faces.

The wife objects strongly to this; it's about the only thing we ever argue about.

I have some good qualities. I run my own business, help her with the housework, don't drink or smoke and keep myself clean.

When I was younger I had a few mild flings with a couple of ladies, but that's all ancient history now.

Grandpa

Dear Grandpa: I think you're entitled to do whatever you want (as long as it's legal) in the privacy of your own home.

And if it's "new faces' you want to view with your x-rated eyes, your wife is lucky they're on film.

Dear Abby:

My foreign-born daughter-in-law opened a business and borrowed money in order to bring some of her relatives here. I am entirely sympathetic to this, but what is making me sick with worry is the way my grandchildren are forced to live. They are beautiful and bright. Last summer they went with their mother to the business in the morning and came home with her at night. They did adult work at least eight hours a day. There wasn't time for play or friendships. Since school started, they work after school three or four hours every night and all weekend. These children are now 8 and 9 years old.

My son can provide adequately for his family, but he continues to allow his children to be workhorses.

He loves these children, but it seems instead of encouraging his wife to become Americanized, he has adopted her lifestyle. This includes using children as laborers.

Are there child labor laws that cover this? And if so, is what they are doing illegal?

Sleepless

Dear Sleepless:

The U.S. child labor law states that no minor under 14 years of age shall be permitted to work in any gainful occupation, "provided that this law shall not be construed to apply to work in agriculture, domestic service in private homes or in employment by a parent or a person standing in place of a parent."

I share your concern, but it seems that your grandchildren are exempt from the child labor laws. Sorry.

Music to warm the heart of spring-time

This cold and windy April, the fires of spring have been slow to kindle. But we were strolling the McGimpsey Trail the other day, collars turned up and hands in our pockets, when I saw something that warmed my heart. It was a clump of Pacific willow shoots, green in the bark and sprung out all over with tiny new leaves.

Shoots of that sort have their uses. They make fine, limber companions for the yard or two of line and worm-baited hook with which one fishes the secretive brush-creeks of sprintime.

They also supply excellent raw material for the practice of a very-nearly-forgotten craft, art or rite. This is the making of a willow whistle.

I pushed through the tangles boardering the trail until I arrived at the willow clump, getting my feet wet in the process. Arrived, I fished out my pocket-knife and haggled down and trimmed a promising shoot. It was not quite as thick as my thumb, and the wood under its easily-peeled bark was slippery with free-flowing sap. Then I plowed back out to the trail.

"What are you going to do with that?" Win asked me.

"I was going to make a willow whistle," I told her. "But I don't know who for."

Christopher, our grandson, is too little still to be interested in a whistle, and anyway, would probably choke on it. The other young ones who drop in at our place are a trifle too old.

"I'm not too old," Win said. "I'd like a willow whistle!"

So, with a reason generously supplied to lend point to the project, I set to work, following a procedure which is as old as boyhood. For all I know, it traces back to the Great God Pan himself.

Next, I ringed the bark with the tip of my knife about four inches along from the wedge-shaped cut, then began to tap on it gently with my knife handle. When I had tapped up and down and all around, I took my whistle-slip in both hands, settled my grip, and administered a quick twist to the bark.

This is a crucial moment. If you have over-estimated the flow of sap, or failed to loosen the bark by sufficient tapping, you can twist yourself blue in the face without result. Or . . . and this is a tragedy . . . the bark may split. But if all goes as it should, the bark will part cleanly in a sleeve or cylinder which can then be slid with ease from the white-gleaming wood.

Only before you slip the bark off, cut a dainty, narrow notch in it about half an inch from the end of the wedge. This is an important, in fact a crucial operation. That notch is the escape hole for the air which you will blow through your whistle. If it isn't just so, no blow!

With that done, slide the cylinder free from the wood and, directly under where you notched the bark, carve out the shoot to about midway through its thickness. (We really should have diagrams to illustrate the process: step-by-step sketches in a border of spring frogs and willow leaves!)

All that remains is to cut a shallow wind-tunnel on top of your wedge-shaped end piece. Then give the bare wood a quick lick to wet it down, and slip the bark sleeve into place on it.

Now for the make-or-break: will she blow, or won't she?

I passed the finished whistle to Win, who puffed on it hopefully. Nothing happened.

"It won't blow," my dear one reported.

Sometimes a bit more knife work . . . a deepening of the notch and a widening of the air tunnel . . . will make the difference between a failed whistle and a successful tottler. I went to work delicately with my knife, then handed the whistle back for another try.

This time, success! We strolled on along the trail with Win making willow-whistle music . . . a thin, elfin piping that could be the very voice of the wild places.

What I have laid out for you here is a trifling accomplishment, and I suppose I should be ashamed of wasting space on it. But somehow, the single-note message of that willow whistle helped warmed the cold heart of the spring.

Instant-cures image is beyond reality

By Dr. BOB YOUNG

"I dressed him and God healed him." This statement of Ambroise Pare is not the same as the somewhat cynical proverb "God heals and the doctor takes the fee"!

Impatience is a characteristic that is more pronounced in the young. An ability to wait comfortably for events to occur or awaited dates to arrive is a sign of maturity — an aspect of maturity that may be late developing in some people.

Modern medicine has perhaps oversold its ability to provide instant cures. Our patients frequently expect that their illnesses will be gone or their pain will disappear once they have consulted the doctor. Most physicians have had the experience of being phoned by a patient who is wondering why they are not better after taking a single dose of an antibiotic.

The athlete of high school or college age is particularly impatient when an injury prevents his continuing to play. No matter how prompt and careful the treatment of a sprain or fracture may be, time is required for healing to occur.

While there may be some pressure applied by an over-enthusiastic coach or trainer to get his star performer back in action, there is no excuse for a physician to allow premature use of the injured part.

Many a youngster has removed the splint or cast within a few days of its application and been surprised to find that his ankle or knee was still as sore as ever.

The rapid turnover of patients in hospital beds also contributes to the myth of instant cure.

When I interned it was usual to keep a patient in bed for about three weeks after a hernia repair. Now they are sent home in about four days, and in some cases on the day following surgery. Healing does not occur faster than it did twenty years ago. It still takes six weeks, but we know that the patient can do more while he or she is waiting.

The modern physician or surgeon has more effective treatments and "dressings" than his forebears, and perhaps makes God's chore easier, but God still does the healing.

MODERN EUROPEAN FICTION IN TRANSLATION

Modern European fiction is said to be quite different from the American or even British fiction. Some maintain it is always ahead of the other traditions, avant-garde, but in a philosophical rather than literary sense. This and other related ideas will be taken up in a detailed discussion of some representative fiction.

Taxman may want his bite

By LES HOLBROOK

"Seniors seeking part-time employment should recognize that such work for pay may make them liable for unexpected income tax payments when they file their tax forms (which most of us are doing about now)," warns Mrs. M.N., Oshawa, Ont. Mrs. N. is a 55-plus volunteer worker who, among many other helpful activities, aids seniors with this annual chore.

"A senior whose tax return I prepared earned $544 during January to March last year. This was his only income from wages and the employer did not deduct tax; he had to pay a surprisingly big chunk of this for tax-money already spent. So a part-time job may boost a senior's morale but may not, in the long run, increase net income as much as anticipated.

"I enjoy preparing tax returns for seniors — at no charge of course. However these people do small jobs for us such as knitting to help my husband and me — a sort of miniature LINK program," Mrs. N. told me.

Money remains the main matter for many seniors as they plan, plead or battle for enough shrinking dollars to at least get by. Give them the tools and they can do the job, without bureaucratic interference, is the gist of a number of letters in this week's mail.

"What a waste of money!" writes Mrs. E.B. of Guelph, enclosing a clipping about university students getting sizeable grants to "examine the economic and social welfare of the recently retired" and, another, "to study the problems of aged ethnic minorities".

"What my husband and I don't understand is why so many people (in endless studies, surveys, seminars and conferences) feel they have to tell retired people how to spend their time. Save all that 'study' money and just augment our income to provide a decent level of living; if we had that there would be no need for youngsters trying to tell us how to enjoy our senior years."

"Re your recent column, my wife and I most definitely do not agree with the idea of taking the Old Age Pension away from anyone — regardless of income," writes R.E.S, Maple Ridge, B.C.

"We ourselves came through the Dirty 30s, worked hard for small wages, planned carefully and saved; now with the help of the OAP we have a comfortable standard of living for our old age.

"We do not see why anyone would consider such an unfair reduction of our income; the Guaranteed Supplement, for those needing it, already is based on income level.

"This kind of thinking would only remove incentive for saving on the part of individuals and we could all end up wards of the State."

And yet, my mail still includes jolly letters. Mrs. B.A. of Simcoe, Ont. writes:

"You wrote about sabbaticals for workers (a year off in every seven). I have been working now for 49 years; do I get the next seven off with pay?" quips C.M. of Fredericton.

Last four hostages freed as prison riot ends quietly

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. (UPI) — Rebellious convicts released their last four hostages today and ended a 16-hour uprising at the Indiana State Prison following negotiations with state officials who agreed to discuss demands that included amnesty for those involved in the insurrection.

Corrections Commissioner Gordon Faulkner announced at 4 a.m. EDT the hostages had been freed and platoons of riot police moved in to secure a cell block and security building containing about 200 inmates.

Faulkner said inmates released the last of the hostages when prison officials agreed to discuss demands including amnesty for those involved in the riot, a review of prisoner arrests and convictions, better medical treatment, and immediate news media attention to problems at the 119-year-old maximum security prison.

He said those discussions would be held this afternoon.

Faulkner said the only injury during the uprising was one sprained ankle.

About 5:30 a.m. a prison guard handed reporters an unsigned news release which read:

"At approximately 3:45 a.m. we secured the release of the hostages unharmed. The institution is being routinely secured. We have agreed to meet with a representative group of inmates to discuss issues of concern to them. We have no specifics at this time but will meet with them later this afternoon."

The riot began at 11:42 a.m. EST Sunday when 30-some prisoners took control of a security unit, and an estimated 150 prisoners took control of cell block C. The prisoners originally took seven hostages, but released three by mid-evening Sunday.

One was set free soon after the trouble began when he became ill. Two more were released when authorities allowed two reporters to monitor negotiations.

Ed Jones, prison director of classifications, said the exact number of prisoners involved in the rioting would not be determined until afternoon.

Dozens of state police and members of a Corrections Department emergency squad were in and about the prison prior to the time 120 state police in two riot platoons moved in to secure the buildings.

Three reporters took part in the negotiations. They were Henry Lane of the Michigan City News-Dispatch, Bill Warrick of WSBG in nearby South Bend, and Russ Ewing of WMAQ-TV in Chicago.

Warrick said Ewing was a major factor in reaching agreement to release the hostages. The Chicago reporter has taken part in dozens of hostage situations in the past decade.

13 escape in Frisco breakout

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Police warned that 10 of the 13 prisoners who fled the Hall of Justice jail may be lining up robberies to finance their flight.

The prisoners staged the surprise breakout — the worst in the jail's history — as deputies and trusties were passing out breakfast Sunday in a maximum security unit. Five sheriff's deputies and a civilian chef were handcuffed and locked in a holding cell.

Two fugitives were captured in the parking lot behind the Hall of Justice and a third arrested running through the building.

No one was hurt, but one prisoner fired a smuggled .38-caliber pistol into the ceiling in the holding cell when he became angry, police said.

"We have information that they'll attempt to perpetrate armed robberies and burglaries Monday," Police Sgt. John Willet said. "We know they're armed, and we assume they're trying to get out of the Bay area."

"We were lucky there wasn't a riot," Sheriff Michael Hennessey said. "We're lucky that no deputies were hurt and that the jail was retaken very quickly."

| 2 ♠ | 3 ♡ | 4 ♠ | 5 ♡ |
| Pass | Pass | Dble | Pass |

Opening lead — king of clubs.

The good players play well, but they don't play perfectly. Bridge is too tough a game for anyone to play without occasionally making mistakes, and the top experts are judged largely by their infrequency of error.

This hand was played in New York in a match between Great Britain and the United States in 1955. I was kibitzing the British star Terence Reese (North) when the bidding shown unfolded. It seemed to me at the time that the redouble was unusually bold. I would have passed five hearts doubled with the North hand, but the end result proved me wrong.

The American West led the king of clubs. Declarer (Boris Schapiro) won with the ace and played the king of spades, which was covered by the ace and ruffed. Schapiro now made eleven tricks easily, since he was able to ruff three diamonds in dummy and discard one on the queen of spades. He lost two diamond tricks at the end, but made five hearts redoubled for a score of 1,250 points.

The outcome would have been different if West had chosen a trump as his opening lead. In that case Schapiro would have gone down one and the American team would have been 1,550 points better off!

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 ♣ | 1 ♠ | 2 ♡ |
| Pass | 3 ♡ | 3 ♠ | 4 ♠ |
| Pass | 5 ♣ | Pass | 5 ♡ |

At this table, also, the opening lead was a club, and again South had no trouble garnering eleven tricks. But the American pair, not having been doubled, scored only 750 points, and the result was that Great Britain gained 500 points on the deal.

A good case can be made for a trump lead by West at either table, but the fact remains that neither West came up with the killing lead.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Great, you've still got fifteen brown eggs left," said Ruth, looking around the little village store. "I was afarid they'd all be gone."

Hank smiled. "I've only had three customers for them today," he told her. "Carrie Waite took a third of what I had, plus a third of an egg. Then the Reactor took a third of what remained, plus a third of an egg. And this afternoon your Uncle Fred took a third of what was left, plus a third of an egg."

The old man is like that! How many had he sold that day?

Burger quiz mistake brings six-month battle

NORTH KINGSTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Mathematician Donald Stanhope, who called in the state attorney general in his six-month battle with McDonald's over a hamburger he claimed he won in a sports quiz, has scored his point.

McDonald's admitted he had the right answer and it may have had the wrong one on a sports trivia quiz last year. The hamburger chain agreed to contribute $1,000 to the Rhode Island Special Olympics Fund to make up for the mistake.

"I think it's terrific," Stanhope said. "It's been so long now, I'm not sure what I wanted out of this thing. But I feel pretty good about it."

Stanhope, 37, has been fighting the chain since October, when he took a McDonald's-sponsored sports quiz that offered a Big Mac as a prize.

The question in question was "which perennial 20-game winner won and lost over 20 games in one season?" Stanhope looked up the answer in a sports encyclopedia and said it was the famed Cy Young, who won 25 and lost 21 in 1894.

McDonald's claimed the correct answer was Walter Johnson. But Stanhope said Johnson had a 25-20 record in 1916, meaning he did not lose "over 20" games.

Stanhope took his case to the Rhode Island attorney general. After two months of negotiations, McDonald's agreed to the settlement.

A spokesman for the hamburger chain defended its actions. "It should be noted that all prizes that were advertised to be awarded were awarded, albeit to the wrong people," Kathryn Misna wrote Attorney General Dennis J. Roberts.

"As such, the customers of McDonald's were not injured ... and McDonald's did not make a windfall," she wrote.

Kennedy edges Carter in Mich.

Los Angeles Times

LANSING, Mich. — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy won a hairbreadth victory Saturday over President Carter in the Michigan Democratic caucuses, a contest that both reflected and intensified the sharp divisions among Democratic activists about their party's choice for 1980 standard-bearer.

Here in the state's capital, where returns were tabulated, party officials said Kennedy had gained 71 of Michigan's 141 national convention delegates, and Carter 70.

Kennedy's advantage was due to an edge of only 230 votes among about 16,000 cast by Democrats who took part in the restricted and complicated caucus procedure.

The peculiar nature of this election — just 40,635 Democrats out of 5.2 million registered voters were eligible to participate — made it impossible to judge the political impact of the abortive mission to rescue the American hostages in Iran or of any other meaningful national issue.

Instead, the Michigan contest boiled down mainly to an organizational struggle between the Kennedy and Carter forces.

The results left Kennedy supporters grimly realistic about the future of the senator's candidacy. The Michigan returns give him a total thus far of only 655 delegates compared to 1,174 for Carter out of 1,666 needed for nomination.

"I don't kid myself in terms of getting a majority," said United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser, one of Kennedy's prime supporters.

"The president of the United States will go to the convention with a majority of the delegates," Fraser predicted, making a concession that Kennedy and his staff members have so far refused to make.

Kennedy flew from Miami to Mexico City late Sunday, meeting today with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo. He expects to campaign this week in Florida, Texas, Colorado and Indiana.

17 survive, 40 die in Thai air crash

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A bolt of lightning struck a Thai airliner as it approached Don Muang International Airport Sunday and the plane crashed less than a mile from a runway, killing at least 40 people and injuring 11 others.

Officials of Thai Airways said 17 people survived, among them four Americans.

An airline spokesman said 57 passengers and crew members were aboard the twin-engine Hawker Siddeley 748 turboprop airliner. The injured survivors were taken to Bangkok's Bhumipol hospital.

Officials said they did not know what became of the remaining six persons aboard but that they might have walked away from the crash.

The British-made short-range airliner, arriving on a flight originating in Udorn in northeastern Thailand, was flying through a thunderstorm and less than a minute from landing when lightning sent it plunging to the ground.

Residents nearby said they saw a "plume of smoke" and one said he heard a "crack, then there it just pounced and turned into a smudge of black and brown with some silver splinters."

Storm batters Cubans

One Cuban who made it – Yamile Ponce

Times News Services

KEY WEST, Fla. — A brutal storm with winds of more than 96 kilometres an hour blasted this area Sunday, heightening fears for the safety of small vessels taking part in the boatlift of refugees from Cuba.

U.S. Coast Guard rescue teams, augmented on presidential order because of concerns for safety of the flotilla, fished at least 14 persons from a turbulent sea with eight-foot waves.

While terror swept the Florida straits, grief and fright among volunteer workers on shore produced anguished cries and sent women to their knees praying for those still at sea.

In Washington, Vice President Mondale issued a statement saying President Carter had ordered the Coast Guard and Navy to help those caught in the storm. Mondale also denounced Cuban President Fidel Castro for breaking a "commitment . . . to help with an orderly, prompt and humane evacuation."

White House officials also accused the Cuban government of refusing to cooperate with Coast Guard attempts to rescue stranded vessels.

The U.S. Coast Guard, which received 29 rescue calls in one five-minute period alone Sunday, reported no deaths or serious injuries.

"The people today should consider themselves very lucky," Cmdr. Samuel Dennis said.

Six boats carrying 650 Cubans arrived Sunday morning before the thunderstorm interrupted the influx. Among them was a six-hour-old boy, born to one of 200 refugees packed aboard a shrimp boat.

While the flow of refugees was momentarily halted, the battle over what to do with them intensified. In Miami, the ultimate destination of most refugees, Mayor Maurice Ferre said he will seek to have the city declared a disaster area.

Meanwhile, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official in Key West said there are signs that Castro is beginning to clean out his jails and mental institutions.

"We had some people here today who said they had been in prison and we had a couple who were obviously mentally deranged," immigration officer Kent Wheeler said.

Coast guard cutters towed in almost 20 disabled boats Sunday, and six exiles were plucked from the sea by a coast guard helicopter after their boat sank.

Siege ends; envoys safe

BOGOTA (Reuter) — Colombian left-wing guerrillas have flown to Cuba and released the last 16 of their hostages after ending a 61-day siege of the embassy of the Dominican Republic.

Four of the hostages were set free here Sunday and the other 12, including U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio, accompanied the guerrillas of the M-19 organization to Havana aboard a Cuban aircraft. All were apparently in good condition.

In Havana, Asencio was met by a private jet chartered by the U.S. state department and then flown to Homestead Air Force Base 50 kilometres south of Miami. He was accompanied by a fellow hostage, Angelo Acerbi, papal nuncio to Colombia, and Msgr. Ubaldo Calabrese, an emissary from Pope John Paul who helped negotiate the release of the captives.

Clark plunges into Quebec fray

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative Leader Joe Clark plunged into Quebec's referendum campaign Sunday with a plea to Quebecers to forget the past and give English Canada another chance.

"We live in a country that has changed a lot, and for the better, a country where Albertans are learning French, a country where large companies are run from Quebec by French-speaking Quebecers," Clark told a rally in Rimouski, 300 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

Clark — who was booed at times during last winter's federal election campaign when he spoke French outside Quebec — told a crowd of 1,500 that "the will to change exists all over Canada."

The Conservative leader, speaking entirely in French at his referendum debut, was accompanied by Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan — who heads the no forces for the May 20 vote — and Justice Minister Jean Chretien, co-ordinator of strategy for the federal Liberals.

Clark's appearance started the week off well for the federalists, who are bringing in another political heavyweight on Friday when Prime Minister Trudeau addresses a business-club luncheon here.

Following Clark's speech, Ryan heaped praise on the Tory leader, saying that "he doesn't have the perspective of only a Westerner . . . or of only a Conservative; he wants what is really best for Canada."

The Tory leader, accompanied by wife Maureen McTeer, flew back to Ottawa after the speeches while Ryan pressed on to Gaspe, 560 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

Ryan had the busier weekend of the two campaign leaders. Saturday, he toured several centres just north of Montreal and he started out from here early Sunday for Rimouski.

The rally, the largest yet for the yes side, commemorated the 40th anniversary of Quebec women getting the vote, and Levesque made the most of the occasion, comparing the drive for women's equality with what he described as the province's evolution towards sovereignty-association.

The premier said women — who make up 52 per cent of Quebec's voters — should vote yes to give the Quebec government a mandate to negotiate on an equal footing with English Canada.

"To say yes is to change, which is the rule of life," said Levesque.

In another of what has become a seemingly-endless series of charges and counter-charges, Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard accused federalist spokesmen Sunday of lowering the tone of the campaign by trying to discredit the PQ.

Oil sabotage threat eyed

CALGARY (CP) — A United States sabatoge expert believes more attention should be paid to petroleum security but Calgary oilmen are reluctant to discuss industry planning on the matter.

"I could train a group of Boy Scouts in a few nights how to cut off 80 per cent of the oil and gas to the eastern United States," said Dr. Maynard Stephens in a telephone interview from his New Orleans office.

"I suppose things are relatively safe right now, but if we got in a confrontation with Iran or Russia, where would they retaliate?" he asked. "Petroleum installations are a natural target because our national security and ability to protect ourselves depends on the free flow of petroleum products."

"But it's very frustrating when you try to tell oil companies their pipelines are vulnerable. They say 'so what?' or are almost paranoid at the thought of having attention drawn to their vulnerability."

"We do have a corporate security section and I frankly decline to make any other comment," said Dan Mulvenna, head of security for Dome Petroleum.

Brink's links ruled out

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto Police have ruled out a connection between a bungled Brink's robbery in Ottawa on Saturday and a $178,000 holdup in Toronto last Thursday.

The three Toronto robbers escaped with three bags of money after killing part-time Brink's guard Larry Roberts, 29, and wounding his partner Ted Montgomery, 51, at an east-end shopping centre.

The two Ottawa thieves, who also struck at a shopping centre, fired six shots but didn't hit anyone. They pistol-whipped a guard, then got away empty-handed.

SHOULD YOU BUY GOLD OR SILVER?

"If you have available liquid funds, buy gold or silver, and do not even look at the price. What you should be interested in is the general trend and not the daily fluctuations. No one can predict the daily fluctuations. One can only have a reasonable opinion and judgement about the trend. As long as there is inflation, and inflation will continue, the value of paper money will go down and the value of precious metals is bound to go up. Experience has shown that the price of precious metals goes up more than the erosion of the purchasing power of paper money; Hence, we tell our friends to put their available liquid funds into precious metals." —Nicholas Deak

Socred council parley ends in discord

Marie Christine Grierson of Winnipeg was appointed president following Arnold's resignation at a meeting where the executive also decided to meet in Calgary this fall to review the party's leadership.

Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy, who was present at the meeting, said he will announce his intentions in the near future.

Arnold told a reporter Social Credit is in pressing need of money and the executive had ordered a fund-raising campaign.

However, Carl O'Malley, who replaced Mrs. Grierson as first vice-president, denied the subject of fund-raising was discussed, although he admitted the party is in debt.

Roy later contradicted O'Malley, saying the party is $20,000 in debt and a fund campaign would start soon. He added the Socreds could easily survive the strain.

Roy also said there is no truth to statements last week by Arnold that western party members want to separate from their Quebec counterparts.

However, he said the executive decided a restructuring of the party — allowing provincial wings more autonomy in an administrative sense — is necessary.

O'Malley said the party's constitution calls for a meeting of the national council once every two years and one is due. He said the meeting will also celebrate the party's 45th anniversary.

According to Arnold, Calgary was chosen because of Alberta's prominence in the party's history. Social Credit ruled the province for 36 years prior to 1971.

After his loss in the March 24 delayed election in Frontenac riding, Roy announced he supports a yes vote in Quebec's upcoming referendum.

However, Arnold said the executive reiterated Sunday the party's official policy clearly supports national unity.

The former party president said the notion of disbanding Social Credit as a national political body was also discussed, but only to prompt discussion on alternatives for the future.

EDMONTON (CP) — A 136,000-acre forest fire burning out of control 190 kilometres northeast of Fort McMurray spread into Saskatchewan during the weekend, threatening the community of Cluff Lake.

Fine singing festival feature

Adjudicator David Astor, summing up two all-choral evenings in the Victoria Music Festival at the weekend, said, "We have heard some very very fine singing. It's been a joy."

From a small family ensemble to a large visiting choir from the Duncan area and a smaller one from Port Alberni; from St.Matthias Chamber Singers to the Village Squires, for lovers of choral music the two evenings were a champagne picnic.

One of the warmest receptions was given the senior citizens' Hampton Choir and the Silver Threads Songmen.

Of the Hampton, an enthusiastic Astor said, "This was a delightful experience for me and for the audience. They obviously love singing and should be an object-lesson for all singers."

The Songmen, he said, produced a vigorous fresh sound with fine support from their bass line. They occasionally sang out of tune but they, too, clearly enjoyed singing.

There were many highlights in the two evenings but the final event was also the crowning one — the performance of the Cowichan Chorale. Singing their first number conducted by assistant conductor Sheila Sartini, and their second under conductor James Johnson, they achieved an outstanding 90 and 91 from conservative Astor.

"This was very impressive," he commented. "Absolutely first class in balance and blend, a splendid handling of dynamics. And what great basses you have. A delightful aspect is that, while of course you have worked at the music and polished it, it sounds so spontaneous. This is a great art."

Another great sound came from the Village Squires. The rich, close weave of their barbershop harmony as sung by good singers and expertly led, drew a storm of applause from the audience and a rare request for an encore from the adjudicator.

In awarding the choir two 88s Astor said everything about their performance had been well done — "spot-on. And what great leads they have."

He was also happy with the Dokken Family (six members), saying it was refreshing to hear music this way; and with St.Matthias Chamber Singers, St.John's Church Choir, St.Mary's Boys Choir, St.Aidan's Church Choir and the Victoria Boys Choir.

In a class for mixed choirs other than church, he was particularly complimentary about the singing of the Timbre Chorus from Port Alberni and Victoria's Les Decibels. He placed them one mark apart, awarding Timbre a winning total of 173.

The Festival continues this week with more piano and vocal classes leading to the vocal championship competitions and Rose Bowl Thursday night, and piano including the Victoria City Medallion contest Friday.

Strings, brass and woodwind, bands and school choral sessions began this morning and will continue through the week.

A thousand times I needed you,
A thousand times I've cried,
If all my love could have saved you dad,
You never would have died.

As soil becomes warmer with more hours of sunlight, even the clay loams will be suitable for planting the new ornamentals that are being bought. Sandy loams have been workable for two or three weeks and new plants are already becoming well-established in these gardens.

Trees and shrubs out of containers need the same soil preparation as do those lifted from nursery rows and sold was wrapped rootballs.

These were known as "baled and burlapped" or B and B, for years until plastic took over.

After selecting the planting site as suited to the plant, begin digging a hole much larger than the apparent spread of the roots. meanwhile be sure the roots are not exposed to either air or sun if taken from the container to see what the root system is like. A cover of wet paper or sacking protects the roots until planted.

Most garden soils need the addition of screened soil from the compost pile and either some coarse peatmoss or some very old cow manure or some mushroom manure.

In some cases, the manure and compost can be left out and coarse sand added. Plants known to want a rather poor but well-drained soil such as many of the brooms, the cloudy pink Tamarix, and the Cistuses will thrive with this treatment. And they all like hot sun so why not make a bed of these three? They will give plentiful flower color in spring and early summer, as well as interesting foliage all year on the Cistuses.

Shrubs and trees develop a dry outer stem covering that we call bark. It is protective to the active tissues lying beneath. When replanting these woody-stemmed plants, it is important to set them into the prepared planting holes so that the finished soil level is exactly at the same height as previously in container or nursery row.

The soil mark is clearly visible on the stem. An easy method for the new gardener is to lay a flat piece of wood across the hole, then set the plant so that the soil mark is level with the wood. If a small plant, one hand can hold the plant level while the other fills in the soil around the roots. Work the soil mixture with the fingers to get it beneath and in close contact with the roots without damaging them. Then pour in water to drive out air as it washes soil in among the finest roots. Leave surface soil only slightly mounded to allow for sinking. Then there will be a slight depression for allowing water to soak down to the roots instead of running off.

Too deep planting is particularly disastrous with shallow-rooting plants such as the rhododendron genus and the camellias.

Non-flowering after planting can often be traced to burying the rootballs too deeply. Lifting and replanting at the appropriate depth frequently corrects the fault in two years time. These plants like a light porous soil mixture above their roots.

Flowering perennials, often listed as herbaceous perennials, will now become popular again as they were 20 years ago when gardeners were really keen to have colorful summer plants that came up every year. Most do need lifting for division or re-rooting of offsets in two or three years, but the plants are still true to the name they had when bought and there is only the one expense in buying.

Summer perennial phlox, double white Esther Read daisies, golden heleniums, new varieties of Daylilies (Hemerocallis), and several dozen Michaelamas-daisy (perennial aster) varieties must still be available at more than one local nursery. Visit nurseries near to you, and watch ads of those in other areas just now. By getting around and making enquiries you may re-discover some of the glory of bygone gardening.

Whatever new plants you buy, plant with care, give water all season with regard to the plant's needs, and look forward to years of pleasure from the endless variety among plants of the garden world.

'Free' monorail rumor shot down by Boeing

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. officials have denied a report that the company planned to build a $12 million monorail linking two Vancouver suburbs, possibly for free.

"Boeing has no agreement with anybody to build something for nothing," Boeing spokesman Jim Grafton said Sunday.

The provincial government received an offer for a demonstration 1.8-mile monorail between Surrey and New Westminster, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday.

Vander Zalm did not name Boeing, but Kurt Hohenwarter of Habegger Industries of Switzerland did.

Hohenwarter said that if the project were successful, the provincial government would pay for it, but if the the project failed to meet expectations, his company and Boeing's aerospace division would pay for the monorail.

Boeing's only involvement in the project was to provide some engineering work to the Swiss company, said Don Crosetto, Boeing Aerospace Co. director of automated transportation.

"We haven't made any kind of proposal," he said.

Cree suit hits at oil barons

CALGARY (CP) — The Cree Nation of northern Alberta is suing for the recognition of aboriginal rights to vast tracts of oil sands, wilderness and homesteading lands now being held by corporations, the province and settlers.

At the same time, the natives are seeking compensation if it's eventually found that their rights had been trampled.

Action launched in the Federal Court of Canada charges the federal and Alberta governments and several oil companies with breaching treaty conditions and usurping native ownership of surface and mineral rights in an approximately 32,000-square-kilometre area.

"We are saying (in the statement of claim) that aboriginal rights have never been surrendered," O'Riley said in an interview. "Therefore, no rights to farmers or companies could be granted in full."

The action is not intended to freeze either agricultural activities or experimental oil sands' programs in the disputed area, O'Riley said.

Hodding Carter may also quit

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has resigned after disagreeing with President Carter's decision to launch a military mission to rescue American hostages in Iran.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said President Carter accepted the resignation.

It was understood also that Hodding Carter, who has been Vance's spokesman as assistant secretary of state for public affairs, was also resigning, but officials declined public comment.

The White House released an exchange of hand-written letters in which Carter told his principal foreign policy adviser: "Because you could not support my decision regarding the rescue operation in Iran, you have made the correct decision to resign."

The president's letter, dated today, went on:

"I know this is a matter of principle for you, and I respect the reasons you have expressed to me."

Vance's letter, written on state department stationery last Monday said he had taken the decision "with a heavy heart."

After listing a number of the administration's foreign policy achievements, Vance told Carter: "I know how deeply you have pondered your decision on Iran. I wish I could support you in it. But for the reasons we have discussed I cannot."

Those reasons were not explained in the letters or by spokesman Powell, who said Vance had left in "an honorable difference in principle on this matter."

But privately, a senior administration official said Sunday night that Vance considered the mission too risky.

In Tehran, Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said the resignation proves the rightness of the Iranian revolutionary cause.

Moinfar said Carter now must resign and "apologize to the American people .

Asked whether Vance's resignation now clears the way for further military efforts against Iran, Moinfar said "our militant people are not afraid of this wild cow's operations."

Powell said Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher would take

Remains display outrages U.S.

Times News Services

The White House reacted with outrage to the display at the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran of the charred remains of American servicemen killed in the aborted commando mission to rescue the American hostages.

"These are the documents of the crimes of America," said Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkahli, as the bodies were displayed to the world press at the occupied embassy.

Khalkhali, known as Iran's hanging judge for sending scores to their deaths before firing squads in the days after the revolution, supervised the transfer of the bodies from the desert airfield where the rescue mission was aborted to the occupied embassy.

He said he "counted nine heads" in the recovered remains and claimed "many" more Americans "turned into powder" in the desert. His count of killed Americans conflicted with White House statements though U.S. officials say the discrepancy may be explained by the fact that one of the commandos who returned lost his wallet during the retreat.

White House spokesman Jody Powell reacted angrily to Khalkali's ghoulish news conference and the display of the bodies. "Clearly that sort of behaviour constitutes a new low in moral depravity," he said.

"That sort of behaviour would also be a violation of Islamic behaviour and principles." Powell said. "It is difficult to believe that a faithful follower of Islam would participate in such a thing."

The bodies will be handed over to representatives of the Pope, the International Red Cross and the Swiss government, Tehran Radio reported today, citing a statement from the office of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

U.S. rates on skids?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and Bankers Trust Co. today trimmed their prime lending rates a full point to 18½ per cent, resuming the uneven decline in the interest rate charged a bank's best business customers.

In addition to the two New York banks, National Bank of Detroit today also made a cut to 18½ percent.

Fuel rationing planned

GREENWICH, N.S. (CP) — A federal plan for the allocation and public rationing of gasoline and fuel oil in Canada will be released within a month, the president of the National Automotive Trades Association of Canada said here Saturday.

David Bruce of Vancouver said the federal plan was drawn up in preparation for the possible closing of the Persian Gulf to oil tanker traffic.

He said that with rationing, Canada's fuel reserves could hold out for three or four months "at best."

That estimate, he said in an interview, takes into account all oil tankers now headed towards Canada and also what is in reserve.

Earlier, he told the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Retail Gasoline Dealers' Association that closing the Persian Gulf to tanker traffic will mean immediate gas rationing in Canada.

If the Persian Gulf were closed, foreign oil would still be available, but at much higher prices.

The allocation and rationing plan was in the formative stage, with the federal government trying to update its emergency energy plan with help from the provinces' energy departments and the oil companies.

"It will operate much like the system in the U.S and is very close to coming out. . . probably within two weeks."

'Budget aim to ease rent-pinch'

RICHMOND (CP) — Measures to ease tight rental housing markets will be contained in the first Liberal budget, federal Public Works Minister Paul Cosgrove said Sunday.

Speaking to reporters and a Liberal party task force in this municipality south of Vancouver, Cosgrove said mortgage renewals at current high interest rates are his greatest concern.

But while provincial governments have shown dissatisfaction with high interest rates, Cosgrove said a major rate-subsidy program is beyond the federal government's means.

No date for the budget has been set, he said.

Cosgrove, minister responsible for the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. which runs federal housing programs, said the shortage of rental space "seems to be a problem even in provinces which are experiencing an outflow of population." Rental markets are especially tight in such cities as Saskatoon, Calgary and Toronto.

Developer Don Rosborough told Cosgrove that first-time homebuyers expect more amenities, such as garages, garbage dispoal units and dishwashers, in their first homes than older people.

"We're not talking about a housing problem, we're talking about an expectations problem," he said.

Father revives drowned son

Police said today a Saanich man's quick action saved the life of his 18-month-old son Sunday after the youngster was found unconscious in Prospect Lake.

Ferdinand Cumpelik found his son Leslie at edge of the lake.

The boy was not breathing.

Cumpelik, 34, began administering mouth-to-mouth rescusitation and the boy revived after about four minutes.

A search for Leslie was started after he vanished from his home at 5065 Prospect Lake Road late in the afternoon.

He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was checked and later released.

Anti-tax TV party

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new political party has appeared in British Columbia.

It's the TV Party — Taxpayers and Voters Party of B.C. — and it's dedicated to ending or lowering taxes, reducing government spending, cutting back government bureaucracy, ending immigration, eliminating all marketing boards, and regulating all financial institutions.

The TVP is running large ads in city newspapers stating that taxpayers and voters are tired of deficit spending, uncontrolled interest rates, rising prices and government arrogance.

The ad also says the average taxpayer works up to five months of the year just to pay government taxes so there are hundreds of millions of dollars available to build convention centres, cultural centres, stadiums and hotels. The TVP says that because of this, thousands of citizens are losing their homes and jobs.

The party also demands greater autonomy for B.C.

It says if elected, it guarantees lower personal income taxes.

Bodies float as jet falls like stone

TORONTO (CP) — A baby flew through the air and screaming passengers bounced off the ceiling when an Air Canada jumbo jet dropped like a stone in a wind pocket Sunday.

"I looked down and my baby was flying off the seat," Lynda Dodd of Saskatoon said later. "I grabbed her and brought her back to me and held her tight."

Lennie Levitsky, whose wife Lynda needed five stitches to close a gash in her chin, said there was no warning for the 254 passengers and 18 crew of the plane, Toronto-bound from Miami, when it ran into sudden turbulence 12,000 metres over Jacksonville, Fla.

"It was just like an elevator, dropping without a stop," Levitsky said. "There was this sense of weightlessness.

"Bodies floated through the air. People bounced off the ceiling. I thought this was it — we were going to crash. It was a terrrifying thing."

As a result of the freak accident, three passengers are in hospital and 42 others received minor injuries when everything loose — pillows, luggage, magazines — flew about the cabin.

Two doctors aboard found none had serious injuries and Air Canada flight 2913 landed on schedule at Toronto International Airport.

Five ambulances and airport limosines were waiting to take the injured to two hospitals.

All have been released except the three — a woman with a fractured back, a woman with broken ribs and an elderly man with a heart condition — who are in satisfactory condition. Air Canada has not disclosed the names of the injured.

Levitsky said there was no warning of trouble as the plane climbed to gain altitude in the 500 kilometres from Miami to Jacksonville.

Then the plane plunged 300 to 600 metres in a matter of seconds before abruptly regaining stability. He said he would have been thrown to the ceiling if he hadn't had his seat belt buckled. When he looked for his wife, she wasn't in her seat.

"Lynda came down in another aisle about six feet away and the arm of the chair where she landed was bent in half by the impact," he said.

He said the most severe jolt was at the rear of the plane and that two stewardesses serving drinks from a wagon had been badly shaken up.

"One man who had been in the washroom told me he ended up standing on his head," Levitsky said.

John Cavill, a spokesman for Air Canada, said the plane hit clear-air turbulence, an atmospheric phenomenon that gives no warning and doesn't show up on radar.

He said there was no damage to the jet and officials would check the flight recorder box to determine how far it fell.

He said the captain decided to continue on to Toronto — rather that return to Miami or land at another airport — because there were no serious injuries.

Avoid the 'catch-up'

Every time there is a 'catch-up' wage settlement, somebody is likely to face adverse economic repercussions — a company and consumers in the case of a private industry settlement, the taxpayers in a public sector settlement.

B.C.'s 27,000 registered nurses, for example, have been offered a 44 per cent wage increase because their salaries have not kept up with the cost of living over the past 10 years. The increase is so large that the provincial health ministery is scrambling to find ways of covering the anticipated budget shortfall.

The experience of the nurses settlement should act as a reminder to the provincial government that it cannot indefinitely delay a review of the B.C. minimum wage.

Firms (there were 1,029 in 1972) which employ several thousand low-wage earners might be happy with the current salary scale of $3 an hour. It's been at that level since 1975. Considering increases in the cost of living, five years is a long time to go without an increase.

Minimum wages across Canada average about 45 per cent of average hourly earnings in each province. In B.C. the minimum wage has dropped to 37 per cent of the average wage. It's the lowest percentage level in 10 years.

Some economists argue that the minimum wage should be lower not higher. They say that it has worked against the largest group of unemployed: unskilled young people who have dropped out of school.

The argument goes that because of higher minimum wages, employers higher fewer people. This leaves a larger number of young people unemployed and unable to acquire work experience that would qualify them for higher paying jobs.

A number of holes can be poked in that argument, but the essential point is that if no action is taken soon by the B.C. government, the day will arrive when a huge catch-up will be necessary — probably around election time. That could cause far more difficulties to small businesses than would gradual increases every year or two.

In the case of the nurses, wage negotiators were accused of being asleep at the wheel in allowing nurses' salaries to slip so far behind the cost of living. The provincial government is the negotiator for minimum wage earners. At the moment it too appears to be dozing.

Cure might be worse

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm says he is working on changes to improve land-use planning procedures for municipalities, regional districts and the provincial government itself.

That is good news. Such changes are certainly needed.

As he proceeds, however, Vander Zalm will have to ensure that the cure he creates is not worse than the disease. Some of the vague suggestions he made during a weekend interview sound a bit ominous.

In particular, he suggested that municipalities might be relegated to "detailed work" in planning and zoning procedures, while the provincial government itself will paint a "broad-brush" picture for each region of the province. The minister did not attempt to draw the line between detailed work and broad-brush pictures, but the idea of the provincial government saying, even in the broadest possible terms, how a municipality should use its land does not seem sound.

One of the chief problems with regional planning is that many citizens and individual area representatives believe the regional board is too remote to understand their unique needs. This problem would be magnified enormously if the decision-maker were to be a civil servant responsible to the centralized government of Victoria. And if Capital Regional District residents don't much like The Stone Castle being in charge of their planning, imagine the reaction of people living in more remote areas of the province.

Such a process would also reduce significantly the opportunity for area residents to have a say in planning their community. The existing process may be overly-long and subject to pressure from interest groups, but it preserves local democracy. It would be extremely difficult for a similar procedure to be devised if the province were the decision-maker.

To devise a planning process that will be both democratic and relatively efficient will not be easy. In his work, however, Vander Zalm should ensure that local democracy is not sacrificed on the altar of efficiency.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Folk spirit of nationhood

When he proposed a working alliance of some kind between the Liberal and New Democratic parties Prime Minister Trudeau might have recalled a famous dictum uttered long ago but more relevant than ever in our time.

Viscount James Bryce, a British statesman of the late nineteenth century, published a classic book on North American politics and of Canada he wrote: "Party seems to exist for its own sake. In Canada ideas are not needed to make parties, for these can live by heredity and, like the Guelfs and Ghibellines of medieval Italy, by memories of past combats."

Regrettably, this is an accurate description of Mr. Trudeau's problem, and the nation's today. We have no truly national party when it is most needed and the Canadian people's work of more than three centuries is suddenly in peril.

Sarcastic rejection

Even heredity, memories, and combats are not enough to recreate such a party. And when Mr. Trudeau tries to invent it, by embracing the NDP, Edward Broadbent rejects the offer with ponderous sarcasm.

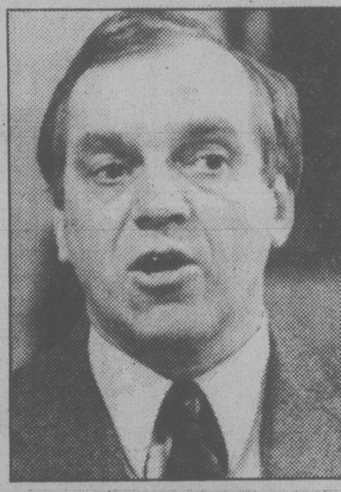
The once great national parties have disintegrated and are geographically split because neither has been able to conceive a distinct policy, much less a philosophy, sufficient for the needs of these changing and dangerous times. But Mr. Trudeau's latest gambit was interesting and significant as reflecting the inner thoughts of a prime minister who seldom reveals them.

That he seeks NDP support in the West, where Liberalism has little or none, is natural. That he would like to absorb and tame the radical element of politics, as Mackenzie King digested the farmers' Progressive party, is logical. And that he himself stands to the left of the political fulcrum is obvious.

After all, he has said, in a rare flash of candor, that the market system no longer works as in earlier times and that a "new" society is emerging. So it is, by gradual and clumsy instalments. Though nobody can yet see more than its rough outlines (with hope or horror), at least we can see Mr. Trudeau's general direction, his strategy conscious and sub-conscious, his advances and retreats.

An extraordinary man, a creature sui generis and quite unpredictable, is moving his government and the nation gingerly but definitely leftward while the United States, next door, is moving rightward and both its potential presidents are conservatives, regardless of their party lables.

Mr. Trudeau might reply, if you asked him, that the motion in Canada is not his but the anonymous current of history, that he is an agent, not an instigator. However that may be, his zig-zag course should not surprise us.



ED BROADBENT
. . . snubbed PM's invitation

In his youth he was a declared and active socialist (in principle anyhow), a wealthy heretic of minority causes who bitterly denounced the conservatism of the Liberal party. As he later wrote: "The only constant factor to be found in my thinking over the years has been opposition to accepted opinions."

Brave words, but he has drastically modified his own opinions since leaving the comfortable ivory tower of academe for the hard realities of power. Thus in the autumn of 1978 he announced an economic reversal of 180 degrees, a policy of restraint, orthodox finance, and eventually balanced budgets. He even confessed, in a forgotten New York speech, that his government had tried to do too much, too fast, with all too familiar results.

If the older and perhaps wiser of many different Trudeaus has shed some youthful illusions he is still a rebel at heart, a rebel against the injustice of society, the human situation everywhere. But his own situation has been totally changed by events that he did not foresee when he assured us that Quebec separatism was "dead" a few months before Rene Levesque arrived in office and planned Canada's destruction.

Through the accidents of politics and Mr. Trudeau's curious talents he finds himself — and we all find ourselves — at the most critical moment, the decisive crossroads of our collective experience. That is why, with his political success and his economic failure, the prime minister now bestrides the nation like a revived colossus as few predecessors ever bestrode it, man and history meeting. In his cabinet he sees no challenger and no visible heir. He is 10 times, or a hundred times, more equal than any colleague.

In the Canadian crisis, however, his personal fortunes are of small account compared to the forces moving in Quebec and the angry West. We no longer face some recurring quarrel between parties and persons, classes and interest groups. We face, in new form the oldest issue of our national life — whether, in fact, the whole Canadian experiment, which most of the world envies, is to continue or collapse.

Ill prepared

For the test ahead of us we are ill prepared. As a people we have failed to grasp the nature, risk, and consequence of decisions that we must make, or begin to make, in the next year or two. Nor has Mr. Trudeau been able, so far, to rekindle the instinct and folk spirit that built the nation and alone can preserve it, as mere political arrangements cannot.

That is his task inherited, against all probability, from the original builders. Whether he is fitted for it we don't know yet. We don't even know our own minds. Hence come two questions: Has a lop-sided electoral majority of Canadians overestimated Mr. Trudeau? More important, has he overestimated them? Before long we shall learn the answer.

WALTER STEWART

A spoiler with no chance

WASHINGTON — John B. Anderson doesn't stand a chance of becoming the next president of the United States, but he scares the bejabbers out of those who do.

To understand why, it is necessary to know something about the man who announced he is an independant candidate, and something about the election he has thrown into a tizzy.

Anderson is a lean, white-haired lawyer and congressman from Rockford, Ill. He wears large glasses, blunt features and a sharp tongue. He has a deep voice and a thin, mean-looking upper lip, but he is not a mean man at all.

Sincerity plus

What he is, is sincere.

He was sincere when he backed Barry Goldwater in 1964, and ranged the nation lambasting the communists and other lefties. He was sincere when, as chairman of the House of Representatives republican conference (a job he held for a decade, 1969-79), he marshalled support for Presidents Nixon and Ford.

He was sincere when he won the unstinting praise of the Americans for Constitutional Action, a group somewhere to the right of George III. The ACA billed him as one of the most conservative members of Congress, a stalwert against "the permissive society."

But then, gosh darn it, he was also sincere when he changed his mind and moved left. He came out for open housing, freer abortion laws, the equal rights amendment, the Panama Canal Treaty, and the ratification of SALT II.

Now the ACA won't speak his name, but the Americans for Democratic Action, the moderate left group has shifted his rating from 0 in 1961 to 55 in 1978, which is not bad for a life-long Republican.

What happened, Anderson says, was that he saw a conflict between his politics and his religion. He is a born-again Christian, and religion won the toss.

In 1968, he cast the deciding vote on an open housing bill — to the horror of conservatives because "there came to bear in my thinking the realization that as a Christian I had to be willing to give up age-old prejudices."

There is nothing as uncomfortable in politics as a man willing to take his lumps — and Anderson did, because of a mere matter of principle — unless it is a man willing to change his mind on the basis of new evidence.

Anderson is an embarrassment to the real candidates, Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush, and Democrats Jimmy Carter and Ted Kennedy, almost everytime he opens his mouth.

He is in favor of a 50-per-cent hike in gasoline prices, an incomes control policy, and women's rights. He is opposed to what he calls "the mad momentum of the arms race." And he spells out his positions with clarity and precision, an underhanded trick if ever there was one.

At the press conference where he announced his withdrawal from the Republican race — which he said he had discovered he could never win — and his rebirth as an independant, Anderson injected a certain amount of apple sauce into the proceedings.

He had just learned, as every candidate does, that the U.S. faces a grave crisis which, by happy coincidence, only he can meet.

At the same time, he enunciated his standard liberal positions, then backed them with his fundamentally conservative creed, calling for "a new ethic of sacrifice and sharing, of conserving and saving."

The problem he poses is that, as he told the press conference, about half the U.S. voters are so dismayed by the presidential choices they face that they plan to stay home in November.

Americans have been turning out at elections in smaller and smaller proportions with longer and longer faces since 1960.

In 1976, a bare 53 per cent of eligible voters went to the polls. A man can get elected by raking in just over one-quarter of the ballots available. This means that a minor shift can have a major effect.

Anderson has 18 per cent of the public opinion polls vote which is not the same thing as the real vote, nor enough to do much with for himself. It is, however, enough to tip the scale against one of the others.

With a low turnout, the switch of a few thousand votes in key states could swing first the states and then the presidency.

Draw support

Conventional wisdom has it that this spoiler effct will work against Carter or Kennedy, because Anderson will draw his support from the moderate left. That may be so, but Anderson is, and remains a Republican. There is a good chance that many Republicans who can't stomach Reagan or Bush and don't want to desert the Grand Old Party will go for Anderson.

If they do, its anybody's ball game.

Anderson says that if everything goes right, the election could be tied and thrown into the House of Representatives, where he might well emerge as President.

It's possible — just as it's possible to spin a coin and land it on the edge — possible but not likely.

Victoria Landmarks

The explosion of the steamer Cariboo in Victoria Harbor wakened the town on August 2, 1861.

She'd left the Hudson's Bay wharf with eight passengers, 35 tons of freight, 11 head of livestock and, Shoal Point rounded, was heading for the outer harbor when the explosion occurred. Captain Jamieson was killed. So was his brother, the assistant engineer.

The small bell on the Hudson's Bay wharf gave an instant alarm, followed by the hook and ladder bell. Three Italian fishing boats, and canoes from the Indian encampment headed towards the Cariboo now floating eastward on a falling tide. The intact steering wheel was found far from the wreck. Small boats towed the wreck to a nearby cove. The steamer Caledonia reached the wreck at four o'clock.

In Victoria, flags were at half-mast that day and conversation centred on the disaster.

New scenario

I think small is beautiful and I wish those blokes from the mainland would leave us in peace.

There's that 'think big' cabinet minister, Dr. McGeer from Vancouver. He wants to build a bridge-tunnel and what-have-you between here and perdition. He says we must start right away, because the diesel for the ferries is going up something fierce and soon we won't be able to afford to run them (seems fuel for cars is OK because Bennett and Alberta are going to subsidize it). McGeer says too if we don't start the tunnel and stuff right away, they will become more expensive because at the rate we and the government are spending, inflation is going to get worse. McGeer ought to know, he's a big-wig professor.

Then there's Jack Davis — he's a Rhodes scholar, an MLA and a heck of a brain, but he says McGeer is all wet. Davis says we should build 10 new superduper mega-ferries, with enough room for everyone now in B.C., Washington and California, and then after 10 years or so build a tunnel, bridge or whatever because by that time there will be more cars and fuel for everyone. Davis says by doing things his way we'll save lots of money. I never did understand new maths.

Another in this conspiracy is a guy called Bawlf. He's not an MLA or civil servant, but he fixed up the Crystal palace just fine, so maybe he's the guy who will build the missing link into a fixed link. Well, he's bound to make it look good at any rate.

Now this Bawlf guy says that the tunnels and bridges and what have you will only cost about $2 to $5 billion — that's just one dollar from every person whose eaten at McDonalds. He figures that in about 15 years (providing there's no interest) both the bridge-tunnels what-have-you and the Crystal will be paid off and after that it will be all pure profit going into a great big Heritage Fund. I bet after that it's a tunnel to Seattle because there'll be lots and lots of construction guys lying around doing nothing but getting drunk on UIC benefits.

The only guy across the way who makes any sense to me is the mayor of New Westminster. The mayor says we should get all the MLAs out of the legislative building in Victoria and into the old, now empty, federal penitentiary.

The mayor says most of the people traveling on our ferries are MLAs and civil servants and if we moved the capital from Victoria to New Westminster we'd never need a bridge-tunnel what-have-you. We wouldn't need much in the way of ferries either. The Queen of Asbestos could handle the lot except in tourist season when we could call in a couple of hydrofoils.

The mayor says the action and population are in the lower mainland and if the capital were moved there, a better tab could be kept on our politicians. For any who get queer ideas, well Riverview is nice and handy.

If the capital is moved, Victoria will have a great big heritage building to do what it likes with — another museum? More boutiques? Juvenile detention home? Extended-care facility? Convention centre? Sally Ann hostel? — well I hand it to you, it's something to bawlf around with.— Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

To volunteers

One behalf of the Victoria Volunteer Bureau and the many voluntary agencies and organizations, I would like to thank all volunteers in the Victoria area who help to make our community and the quality of life better by their considerate contributions of time, skills and service.

We would also like to encourage all those people who may have entertained the thought of volunteering to get involved — now is just the right time! — Donald A. Shaw, President, Victoria Volunteer Bureau.

Contemporary sketch of the Pacific

It was undoubtedly the wreck of the Pacific which sank off Cape Flattery on Nov.4, 1875. In the disaster, more than 250 passengers and crew, mostly Victorians, lost their lives.

The Pacific, a U.S.-owned vessel, commanded by Capt. J.D. Howell, docked in Victoria to take on passengers bound for San Francisco. The exact number aboard will never be known. Her decks were packed with people, especially miners from the Cassiar gold rush.

The Pacific collided with the Orpheus, a sailing vessel bound from San Francisco to Nanaimo for coal, about 10 p.m. and only two persons aboard the Pacific survived.

What shocked Victorians were claims that the Orpheus didn't stop to save those on the steamer. Her master later said he was unaware the Pacific was sinking.

However, members of his crew testified at an inquiry that the cries of the drowning people could plainly be heard by all aboard and the captain refused to turn back.

It was later determined the Pacific should never have been allowed at sea. She was an old hulk and had been officially retired from active service in 1872.

But U.S. marine regulations lagged behind other advanced nations in the 19th century and the owners brought her out to cash in on the gold rush.

Empress hosts Royal lunch

But the luncheon will proceed as originally planned, a Capital Region District health department spokesman said today.

A number of health violations in the kitchen have been corrected and the regional health office is satisfied the Empress meets provincial health standards, the spokesman said.

The lunch was almost cancelled several weeks ago when federal health inspectors checking out the kitchen found a number of equipment problems that meant the hotel was not living up to standards provided in the provincial health act.

The venerable old hotel is operating its kitchen under a temporary 90-day licence which expires next month.

But according CRD health officer Don Wakelin it is standard practice to issue interim licences to restaurants undergoing equipment improvements or renovations, as long as the infractions are of a minor nature.

Itinerary set for princess

She is scheduled to fly into Pat Bay airport at 7:20 p.m. and then retire to Government House.

The princess is colonel-in-chief of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) and the regiment has planned a number of events during her visit.

On Wednesday evening, she will attend an official reception and dinner given by Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving for the officers of the Canadian Scottish.

The next morning she will visit the Legislative Buildings and then at 10:15 a.m. leave for Nanaimo.

While there, she will inspect the regimental cadet corps and attend a civic luncheon, returning in the afternoon via the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway. Thursday night, there will be a Government House reception given by Premier Bennett.

A visit to Victoria city hall is planned for 12:45 p.m. Friday. Princess Alexandra is scheduled to sign the guest book and then attend a civic luncheon at The Empress.

That afternoon she will tour the Provincial Museum's native Indian and natural history galleries.

At 3:40 p.m. Friday, the Princess is due to arrive at the Bay Street armory for a royal salute by the Canadian Scottish pipes and drums. The princess will inspect the quarter guard, view displays, attend a reception in the messes and unveil a plaque officially declaring the regimental museum open. That night she will attend a dinner at the Union Club.

The Canadian Scottish Regiment will exercise the freedom of the city at 10:30 a.m. Saturday on Government Street in front of The Empress, parading to the lawns in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Princess Alexandra is to arrive about 11 a.m. to inspect the regiment and then attend a regimental lunch at Work Point barracks.

She will leave Victoria Sunday, May 4, on a flight to London, England.

As funds and facts are unearthed, the restoration of the old military base slowly proceeds

Old Fort Rodd: a task for a sleuth

From lanterns to roofing, any material used in the restoration must be authentic — and it's sometimes hard to find out just what was in common use a hundred years ago

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Ron Lovatt thinks his job is a little like a sleuth's.

"It's an enormous detective game. I begin with a clue of some kind and follow it until I either come up with the answer or at least some other clue I can start all over with," says Lovatt.

As the historian helping to recreate Fort Rodd Hill military base, Lovatt investigates the smallest details of history.

Fort Rodd is a national historic park that's in the process of being restored to show different periods of its history as an important military bulwark on the Pacific ocean. It's the only national historic park west of Ontario.

Although federal government budget cuts have slowed work on the park, superintendent Ian MacLean says he hopes Fisgard Lighthouse will open by October and that by the summer of 1981, the Upper Battery will be completely restored.

For two years, Lovatt, whose background is military history, has been investigating just about every aspect of life at the military base which was first used in 1877.

The historian uses a variety of methods to get information about the past, including official records, old photographs, artifacts found at the site and talking to people who are personally familiar with the history.

Lovatt has used all of these techniques but he doesn't overlook luck either.

It was the only record he had of it.

People's recollections can be very helpful, particularly in restoring a site such as Fort Rodd which has a comparatively short history, but memories are often faulty and must be regarded with caution, he said.

His job is to supply two general types of information: An overview of the military outpost and detailed information about particular items or practises.

Examples of other research subjects include the types of lanterns, barbed wire and guns used at the Fort.

Lovatt explained that the park just doesn't settle for any style of object that seems vaguely correct.

For example he spent several months tracking down the exact kind of lantern that would have been used at the Fort.

He knew of two museums in Great Britain that contain a variety of military artifacts.

When he contacted them, he learned that one particular style of lantern had been issued to all British garrisons of the day.

Armed with that information and confirmation from several people who could remember the old Fort, he's confident he's found the authentic lantern.

Fort Rodd as a national historic park is governed by a policy that says any replacement of material must be authentic.

Consequently when new roofing materials are applied to a battery roof, for example, the tar and gravel material must be as close to the original material as possible.

Concrete from old stairways is analysed and when a new stairway is built the same mix of concrete is used.

At the time the Fort was built, lumber was the same dimension as its name.

A two-by-four was exactly that and not a pared down size, as it is today.

So when reconstruction involving lumber is done arrangements have to made with a saw mill to provide the specially-cut items.

Maintenance supervisor Earl Pallister says its becoming more difficult and much more expensive to get that kind of custom service.

"That's what makes the cost of restoring this site so high," said Pallister.

"I really question a lot of the so-called restoration work that's being done around the country when people say they've restored something but really they've only half-copied the original.

"We don't try to phoney anything up — if we can't replace it with an authentic object we let people know," he said.

One of the harder tasks was locating a sufficiently skilled wood carver to replace the ornately scrolled wooden mantlepiece in the warrant officers quarters — and there was only a short section of the original to guide him.

Police keep beaches quiet

A police crackdown on wild beach parties in Saanich produced a much quieter weekend for residents and a bonanza of seized liquor and beer.

Sgt. Bob Wray, in charge of the beach patrol Saturday night, reported seizures of 148 bottles of beer and 41 ounces of liquor.

Four minors were charged with possession of alcohol.

Friday night police confiscated 355 bottles of beer, 104 ounces of liquor and 182 ounces of wine and laid 14 charges.

Wray said 22 complaints were investigated Saturday, including five noisy beach parties and a trespassing incident.

Plainclothes officers in Saanich liquor stores prevented many under-age youths from buying liquor and vehicles approaching beach areas were checked for liquor, resulting in most of the seizures.

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

A B.C. Supreme Court injunction preventing Saanich from doubling the size of Tillicum shopping centre is nothing more than a temporary inconvenience, according to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier.

Lawyers for Saanich and developers Cal Investments Ltd. will eventually straighten out the problem, he said.

"We'll just have to see how things develop," he said.

During a special meeting Thursday, Saanich council voted 5-4 to lift a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 295,000 square feet.

Friday morning the Capital Region District asked for an injunction.

The covenant had been officially removed by the time the injunction was processed and served to the municipality Friday afternoon, according to Couvelier.

All the injunction has done is cause the court registrar to delay removing the covenant from the official deed, he explained.

And the mayor admitted the injuction does prevent the municipality from issuing any building permits to Cal Investments.

But he said Saanich has many legal opportunities to win the battle against the CRD.

"There are many options available to bring this thing to a head."

The ex-parte application, meaning one party applies without the other party being present, goes into effect immediately.

Saanich must give the regional board two days notice before appealing the injunction.

Couvelier said the fight boils down to a battle over which Greater Victoria shopping mall will get Eatons.

It is in the regional board's and Victoria's best interests to create delaying tactics and drag the issue out as long as possible, the mayor charged.

Asked whether long delays will cause Eatons to withdraw from Tillicum shopping centre and locate in another mall, Couvelier declined comment.

The developers Thursday offered Saanich an extra $375,000 for road widening in addition to a $300,000 offer for road improvements made last Monday.

The 200,000 square foot Eatons expansion — if it goes ahead — will make the $30 million complex the largest shopping centre in the Greater Victoria area.

Parents' pressure closes school street

City hall has gone along with a request from the parents' auxiliary at Quadra school and agreed to close Fifth Street behind the school for a trial period until the end of the school term.

The street separates the school from the playground, and is sometimes unsafe, especially when parents drop off and pick up their children.

City engineer John Sansom and the traffic advisory subcommittee have recommended to council that the street be closed for the distance separating the school and playground.

Meanwhile, council has received a request to declare 309 Simcoe Street a heritage house.

The 90-year-old house near the corner of Oswego and Simcoe, built in 1891 for wholesale merchant Harold Ault, is described as a landmark building in the James Bay neighborhood.

The heritage advisory committee recommended designation, which would prevent demolition or major alterations to the exterior. The owner would also have his municipal property taxes rebated if he spends the money on exterior restoration work.

Scenic trails mapped in Highlands

The Highland District Community Association has prepared a detailed plan for a trail system which could be established in the area to provide maximum recreation potential.

The plan — prepared last summer by two students hired by the association with funding from the Provincial Youth Employment program — recommends four main trails following two ridges of land and two watercourses be created.

The four trails would link scenic walks with points of interest and would themselves be interconnected by a system of minor trails.

The study also touched on the possibility of creating areas for horse and motorcycle trails.

Possible parking and transit terminal sites were identified in the study.

The four main trails proposed for the area are:

—Craigflower trail which follows Craigflower Creek.

The study also presents considerable information about how a trail system could be created without any outright purchase of most of the land.

Bob McMinn, chairman of the association's planning committee, said preserving at least some recreation potential in the Highlands is an opportunity that will be lost completely if action isn't taken very soon.

The association would like to use provisions set out in the municipal and highways acts that allow trails to be dedicated in the same way roads are commonly dedicated.

Under those provisions people applying to subdivide their land might be required to dedicate no more than five per cent of their land for public use which, according to the acts, could include trails.

But CRD planner Yoon Chee, who's working on the secondary plan, has some doubts about whether the provincial government is prepared to implement its legislation to that extent.

Chee also mentioned that consideration would have to be given to the increasing risk of fires if trails are built through out the area.

"It's got a lot of favorable ideas that should be looked into. It's a long term plan that would require co-operation from the provincial government."

McMinn feels strongly that if there's agreement in principle that some long term recreation use be made of the Highlands it's vital a plan for a trail system be formally recognized as soon as possible before too much land is subdivided and the opportunity to have trails dedicated is lost.

Fine singing festival feature

Adjudicator David Astor, summing up two all-choral evenings in the Victoria Music Festival at the weekend, said, "We have heard some very very fine singing. It's been a joy."

From a small family ensemble to a large visiting choir from the Duncan area and a smaller one from Port Alberni; from St.Matthias Chamber Singers to the Village Squires, for lovers of choral music the two evenings were a champagne picnic.

One of the warmest receptions was given the senior citizens' Hampton Choir and the Silver Threads Songmen.

Of the Hampton, an enthusiastic Astor said, "This was a delightful experience for me and for the audience. They obviously love singing and should be an object-lesson for all singers."

The Songmen, he said, produced a vigorous fresh sound with fine support from their bass line. They occasionally sang out of tune but they, too, clearly enjoyed singing.

There were many highlights in the two evenings but the final event was also the crowning one — the performance of the Cowichan Chorale. Singing their first number conducted by assistant conductor Sheila Sartini, and their second under conductor James Johnson, they achieved an outstanding 90 and 91 from conservative Astor.

"This was very impressive," he commented. "Absolutely first class in balance and blend, a splendid handling of dynamics. And what great basses you have. A delightful aspect is that, while of course you have worked at the music and polished it, it sounds so spontaneous. This is a great art."

Another great sound came from the Village Squires. The rich, close weave of their barbershop harmony as sung by good singers and expertly led, drew a storm of applause from the audience and a rare request for an encore from the adjudicator.

He was also happy with the Dokken Family (six members), saying it was refreshing to hear music this way; and with St.Matthias Chamber Singers, St.John's Church Choir, St.Mary's Boys Choir, St.Aidan's Church Choir and the Victoria Boys Choir.

In a class for mixed choirs other than church, he was particularly complimentary about the singing of the Timbre Chorus from Port Alberni and Victoria's Les Decibels. He placed them one mark apart, awarding Timbre a winning total of 173.

The Festival continues this week with more piano and vocal classes leading to the vocal championship competitions and Rose Bowl Thursday night, and piano including the Victoria City Medallion contest Friday.

Strings, brass and woodwind, bands and school choral sessions began this morning and will continue through the week.

The schools dance honor performance is also scheduled for Thursday at Central Junior Secondary.
